

LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE IN ENGLISH

8695/09

Paper 9 Poetry, Prose and Drama

For Examination from 2016

SPECIMEN PAPER

2 hours

Additional Materials: Answer Booklet/Paper

READ THESE INSTRUCTIONS FIRST

If you have been given an Answer Booklet, follow the instructions on the front cover of the Booklet.

Write your Centre number, candidate number and name on all the work you hand in.

Write in dark blue or black pen.

Do not use staples, paper clips, highlighters, glue or correction fluid.

Answer two questions, each from a different section.

You are reminded of the need for good English and clear presentation in your answers.

At the end of the examination, fasten all your work securely together.

All questions in this paper carry 25 marks.

The specimen paper is for general illustrative purposes. Please see the syllabus for the relevant year of the examination for details of the set texts.

This document consists of 14 printed pages and 2 blank pages.

CAMBRIDGE
International Examinations

Section A: Poetry

THOMAS HARDY: Selected Poems

- 1 Either (a) 'Hardy's chief concern is memory and reminiscence.'

Discuss the poetic methods used by Hardy to present memories in two poems.

- Or (b) Discuss the effects of the following poem in detail, commenting in particular on ways in which Hardy presents the speaker's mood.

The Darkling Thrush

I leant upon a coppice gate
 When Frost was spectre-gray,
 And Winter's dregs made desolate
 The weakening eye of day.
 The tangled bine-stems scored the sky 5
 Like strings of broken lyres,
 And all mankind that haunted nigh
 Had sought their household fires.

The land's sharp features seemed to be
 The Century's corpse outleant, 10
 His crypt the cloudy canopy,
 The wind his death-lament.
 The ancient pulse of germ and birth
 Was shrunken hard and dry, 15
 And every spirit upon earth
 Seemed fervourless as I.

At once a voice arose among
 The bleak twigs overhead
 In a full-hearted evensong
 Of joy illimited; 20
 An aged thrush, frail, gaunt, and small,
 In blast-beruffled plume,
 Had chosen thus to fling his soul
 Upon the growing gloom.

So little cause for carolings 25
 Of such ecstatic sound
 Was written on terrestrial things
 Afar or nigh around,
 That I could think there trembled through
 His happy good-night air 30
 Some blessed Hope, whereof he knew
 And I was unaware.

SEAMUS HEANEY: District and Circle

- 2 Either (a) Discuss ways in which Heaney suggests the importance of physical work in his poetry. Refer to two poems in your answer.
- Or (b) Comment closely on how the language and tone of the following poem present the speaker's experience.

A Chow

I'm staring at the freshly scratched initials
 Of Robert Donnelly in the sandstone coping
 Of Anahorish Bridge, with Robert Donnelly
 Beside me, also staring at them.

'Here,' he says, 5
 'Have a chow of this stuff,' stripping a dulse-thin film
 Off the unwrapped ounce of Warhorse Plug –
 Bog-bank brown, embossed, forbidden man-fruit
 He's just been sent to buy for his father, Jock.

The roof of my mouth is thatch set fire to 10
 At the burning-out of a neighbour, I want to lick
 Bran from a bucket, grit off the coping stone.
 'You have to spit,' says Robert, 'a chow's no good
 Unless you spit like hell,' his ginger calf's lick
 Like a scorch of flame, his quid-spurt fulgent. 15

Songs of Ourselves

- 3 Either (a) Compare ways in which two poems from your selection express grief.
- Or (b) Comment closely on ways in which the writer presents the effects of the passing of time in the following poem.

Country School

You know the school; you call it old –
 Scrub-worn floors and paint all peeled
 On barge-board, weatherboard and gibbet belfry.

Pinus betrays, with rank tufts topping
 The roof-ridge, scattering bravely 5
 Nor'west gale as a reef its waves
 While the small girls squeal at skipping
 And magpies hoot from the eaves.

For scantling Pinus stands mature
 In less than the life of a man; 10
 The rusty saplings, the school, and you
 Together your lives began.

O sweet antiquity! Look, the stone
 That skinned your knees. How small
 Are the terrible doors; how sad the dunny 15
 And the things you drew on the wall.

Allen Curnow

Section B: Prose

TSITSI DANGAREMBGA: Nervous Conditions

- 4 Either (a) Discuss the effects which Dangarembga creates with Tambu's first person narration.
- Or (b) Comment closely on the following passage, paying particular attention to ways in which Dangarembga presents the relationship between Nhamo and Tambu.

'Babamukuru says I am so bright I must be taken away to a good school and be given a good chance in life. So I shall go and live with Babamukuru at the mission. I shall no longer be Jeremiah's son,' he shouted, speaking my father's name in such derogatory tones that for once I was up in arms on my father's behalf. 'I shall wear shoes and socks, and shorts with no holes in them, all brand new, bought for me by Babamukuru. He has the money. I will even have underwear – a vest and pants. I shall have a jersey in winter, and probably a blazer too. I shall stop using my hands to eat. I will use a knife and fork.'

I think a little jealousy was permissible, even healthy under the circumstances. Unfortunately, since I had stopped reacting to Nhamo a long time ago, so that all the annoying things he did had been building up for a long time, and since this time the irritation was too persistent to ignore, I was more than a little, less than healthily jealous. This was untactical of me because Nhamo carried on in the way that he did, describing himself in unqualified superlatives and suggesting that his good fortune was unquestionably deserved, a natural consequence of the fact that he was Nhamo, only in order to bait me. And eventually, my composure of the past few years, dating from the time we had fought on the football pitch at Sunday School, disintegrated into so many fine particles. I rose magnificently to the bait.

'Ha! You are so stupid,' I jeered. 'If you are going to the mission to use a knife and fork, you will be disappointed. Didn't you see Babamukuru eat with his hands? All of them – Maiguru and those proud children. They all ate with their hands.'

'Did you want them to embarrass us?' he retorted. 'If they had wanted knives and forks, where would we have taken them from? But in their own home they use them. Each one has his own plate with his own portion of food and his knife and fork. I saw it. That's what happened when we went to eat in Salisbury at Maiguru's brother's house, the one who is a medical doctor. I asked Chido if they eat like that at home and he said yes.'

I could not argue with such concrete evidence so I attacked from another position. 'You will still be our father's son. You will still be my brother. And Netsai's. Even if you don't like it. So you had better stop being proud for nothing and be grateful to Babamukuru for helping you.'

'And you had better stop being jealous. Why are you jealous anyway?' he retaliated, free to use all his ammunition now because I had begun the engagement. 'Did you ever hear of a girl being taken away to school? You are lucky you even managed to go back to Rutivi. With me it's different. I was meant to be educated.'

'I'm glad you are going,' I said. 'Your voice makes noise. It hurts my ears.'

'And you have eyes like a chameleon! I can see you are getting angry. You are going dark like one. Be careful, otherwise you will stay that way and people will run away from you in case you bite them. Be careful, be careful! In case you bite!'

I picked up a rock and flung it at him. Nhamo sat unperturbed, following the missile's trajectory with exaggerated movements of his head. It landed harmlessly in the grass. He laughed. I dived for him, but he was up and running lightly towards the cattle kraal, laughing and chanting 'Du-du-muduri, kache! Rwavi muduri kache! Tambu muduri, kache! Pound well while I am eating potatoes at the mission!'

I considered running after him to give him the thrashing he deserved, but judging his head-start, saw that I would not catch him. Besides, we were so evenly matched these days that he might have won a fight or I might have, but I had not fought for a long time and I was out of practice. Today it was better not to fight than not to win. I let him go, still very cross with him for saying such silly things.

E. M. FORSTER: A Passage to India

- 5 Either (a) Discuss Forster's presentation of Professor Godbole and consider his significance to the novel.
- Or (b) Comment closely on ways Forster presents Ronny's thoughts in the following passage.

The death took subtler and more lasting shapes in Chandrapore. A legend sprang up that an Englishman had killed his mother for trying to save an Indian's life – and there was just enough truth in this to cause annoyance to the authorities. Sometimes it was a cow that had been killed – or a crocodile with the tusks of a boar had crawled out of the Ganges. Nonsense of this type is more difficult to combat 5 than a solid lie. It hides in rubbish-heaps and moves when no one is looking. At one period two distinct tombs containing Esmis Esmoor's remains were reported: one by the tannery, the other up near the goods station. Mr McBryde visited them both and saw signs of the beginning of a cult – earthenware saucers and so on. Being an experienced official, he did nothing to irritate it, and after a week or so the rash died 10 down. 'There's propaganda behind all this,' he said, forgetting that a hundred years ago, when Europeans still made their home in the countryside and appealed to its imagination, they occasionally became local demons after death – not a whole god perhaps, but part of one, adding an epithet or gesture to what already existed, just as the gods contribute to the great gods, and they to the philosophic Brahm. 15

Ronny reminded himself that his mother had left India at her own wish, but his conscience was not clear. He had behaved badly to her, and he had either to repent (which involved a mental overturn), or to persist in unkindness towards her. He chose the latter course. How tiresome she had been with her patronage of Aziz! What a bad influence upon Adela! And now she still gave trouble with ridiculous 20 'tombs', mixing herself up with natives. She could not help it, of course, but she had attempted similar exasperating expeditions in her lifetime, and he reckoned it against her. The young man had much to worry him – the heat, the local tension, the approaching visit of the Lieutenant-Governor, the problems of Adela – and threading them all together into a grotesque garland were these Indianizations of Mrs Moore. 25 What does happen to one's mother when she dies? Presumably she goes to heaven, anyhow she clears out. Ronny's religion was of the sterilized public-school brand, which never goes bad, even in the tropics. Wherever he entered, mosque, cave or temple, he retained the spiritual outlook of the Fifth Form, and condemned as 'weakening' any attempt to understand them. Pulling himself together, he dismissed 30 the matter from his mind. In due time he and his half-brother and -sister would put up a tablet to her in the Northamptonshire church where she had worshipped, recording the dates of her birth and death and the fact that she had been buried at sea. This would be sufficient.

And Adela – she would have to depart too; he hoped she would have made the suggestion herself ere now. He really could not marry her – it would mean the end 35 of his career. Poor lamentable Adela ... She remained at Government College, by Fielding's courtesy – unsuitable and humiliating, but no one would receive her at the Civil Station. He postponed all private talk until the award against her was decided. Aziz was suing her for damages in the sub-judge's court. Then he would ask her to 40 release him. She had killed his love, and it had never been very robust; they would never have achieved betrothal but for the accident to the Nawab Bahadur's car. She belonged to the callow academic period of his life which he had outgrown – Grasmere, serious talks and walks, that sort of thing.

Chapter 28

Stories of Ourselves

- 6 Either (a) Referring to two stories, discuss ways in which writers present characters' relationships with different places.
- Or (b) Comment closely on ways the writing of the following passage presents the narrator's experience.

Mamaiji came out and settled in her chair on the veranda. Seated, there was no trace of the infirmity that caused her to walk doubled over. Doctors said it was due to a weak spine that could not erect against the now inordinate weight of her stomach. From photographs of Mummy's childhood, I knew Mamaiji had been a big handsome woman, with a majestic countenance. She opened her bag of spinning things, although she had been told to rest her eyes after the recent cataract operation. Then she spied me with the tweezers. 5

'Sunday dawns and he makes the child do that duleendar thing again. It will only bring bad luck.' She spoke under her breath, arranging her spindle and wool; she was not looking for a direct confrontation. 'Plucking out hair as if it was a slaughtered chicken. An ill-omened thing, I'm warning you, Sunday after Sunday. But no one listens. Is this anything to make a child do, he should be out playing, or learning how to do bazaar, how to bargain with butcher and bunya.' She mumbled softly, to allow Daddy to pretend he hadn't heard a thing. 10

I resented her speaking against Daddy and calling me a child. She twirled the spindle, drawing fibres into thread from the scrap of wool in her left hand as the spindle descended. I watched, expecting – even wishing – the thread to break. Sometimes it did, and then it seemed to me that Mamaiji was overcome with disbelief, shocked and pained that it could have happened, and I would feel sorry and rush to pick it up for her. The spindle spun to the floor this time without mishap, hanging by a fine, brand new thread. She hauled it up, winding the thread around the extended thumb and little finger of her left hand by wagging the wrist in little clockwise and counter-clockwise half-turns, while the index and middle fingers clamped tight the source: the shred of wool resembling a lock of her own hair, snow white and slightly tangled. 15 20 25

Mamaiji spun enough thread to keep us all in kustis. Since Grandpa's death, she spent more and more time spinning, so that now we each had a spare kusti as well. The kustis were woven by a professional, who always praised the fine quality of the thread; and even at the fire-temple, where we untied and tied them during prayers, they earned the covetous glances of other Parsis. 30

I beheld the spindle and Mamaiji's co-ordinated feats of dexterity with admiration. All spinning things entranced me. The descending spindle was like the bucket spinning down into the sacred Bhikha Behram Well to draw water for the ones like us who went there to pray on certain holy days after visiting the fire-temple. I imagined myself clinging to the base of the spindle, sinking into the dark well, confident that Mamaiji would pull me up with her wagging hand before I drowned, and praying that the thread would not break. I also liked to stare at records spinning on the old 78-rpm gramophone. There was one I was particularly fond of: its round label was the most ethereal blue I ever saw. The lettering was gold. I played this record over and over, just to watch its wonderfully soothing blue and gold rotation, and the concentric rings of the shiny black shellac, whose grooves created a spiral effect if the light was right. The gramophone cabinet's warm smell of wood and leather seemed to fly right out of this shellacked spiral, while I sat close, my cheek against it, to feel the hum and vibration of the turntable. It was so cosy and comforting. Like missing school because of a slight cold, staying in bed all day with a book, fussed over by Mummy, eating white rice and soup made specially for me. 35 40 45

Daddy finished cutting out and re-reading the classified advertisement. 'Yes, this is a good one. Sounds very promising.' He picked up the newspaper again, then remembered what Mamaiji had muttered, and said softly to me, 'If it is so duleendar and will bring bad luck, how is it I found this? These old people –' and gave a sigh of mild exasperation. Then briskly: 'Don't stop now, this week is very important.' He continued, slapping the table merrily at each word: 'Every-single-white-hair-out.' 50

Of White Hairs and Cricket

Section C: Drama

PETER SHAFFER: *Equus*7 Either (a) 'He's my son. I lie awake every night thinking about it.'

Discuss Shaffer's presentation of Dora and her role in the play.

Or (b) Comment closely on the ways the following passage presents Dysart and his methods.Alan rises and enters the square. He is subdued.Dysart: Good afternoon.Alan: Afternoon.Dysart: I'm sorry about our row yesterday.Alan: It was stupid. 5*Dysart:* It was.Alan: What I said, I mean.Dysart: How are you sleeping?Alan shrugs.

You're not feeling well, are you? 10

Alan: All right.Dysart: Would you like to play a game? It could make you feel better.Alan: What kind?Dysart: It's called Blink. You have to fix your eyes on something: say, that little stain over there on the wall – and I tap this pen on the desk. The first time I tap it, you close your eyes. The next time you open them. And so on. Close, open, close, open, till I say Stop. 15*Alan:* How can that make you feel better? 20*Dysart:* It relaxes you. You'll feel as though you're talking to me in your sleep.Alan: It's stupid.Dysart: You don't have to do it, if you don't want to.Alan: I didn't say I didn't want to. 25*Dysart:* Well?Alan: I don't mind.Dysart: Good. Sit down and start watching that stain. Put your hands by your sides, and open the fingers wide.He opens the left bench and Alan sits on the end of it. 30The thing is to feel comfortable, and relax absolutely ...
Are you looking at the stain?Alan: Yes.Dysart: Right. Now try and keep your mind as blank as possible.Alan: That's not difficult. 35

Dysart: Ssh. Stop talking ... On the first tap, close. On the second, open. Are you ready?

Alan nods. Dysart taps his pen on the wooden rail. Alan shuts his eyes. Dysart taps again. Alan opens them. The taps are evenly spaced. After four of them the sound cuts out, and is replaced by a louder, metallic sound, on tape. Dysart talks through this, to the audience – the light changes to cold – while the boy sits in front of him, staring at the wall, opening and shutting his eyes.

The Normal is the good smile in a child's eyes – all right. It is also the dead stare in a million adults. It both sustains and kills – like a God. It is the Ordinary made beautiful: it is also the Average made lethal. The Normal is the indispensable, murderous God of Health, and I am his Priest. My tools are very delicate. My compassion is honest. I have honestly assisted children in this room. I have talked away terrors and relieved many agonies. But also – beyond question – I have cut from them parts of individuality repugnant to this God, in both his aspects. Parts sacred to rarer and more wonderful Gods. And at what length ... sacrifices to Zeus took at the most, surely, sixty seconds each. Sacrifices to the Normal can take as long as sixty months.

The natural sound of the pencil resumes.

Light changes back.

(to Alan) Now your eyes are feeling heavy. You want to sleep, don't you? You want a long, deep sleep. Have it. Your head is heavy. Very heavy. Your shoulders are heavy. Sleep.

The pencil stops. Alan's eyes remain shut and his head has sunk on his chest.

Act 1, Scene 19

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV Part 1

- 8 Either (a) In what ways does Shakespeare dramatise historical unrest in the play?
- Or (b) Comment closely on the following passage, discussing the dramatic presentation and impact of this moment in the play.

Enter DOUGLAS.

Douglas: Another king! They grow like Hydra's heads.
I am the Douglas, fatal to all those
That wear those colours on them. What art thou,
That counterfeit'st the person of a king? 5

King: The King himself, who, Douglas, grieves at heart
So many of his shadows thou hast met,
And not the very King. I have two boys
Seek Percy and thyself about the field;
But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily, 10
I will assay thee; so, defend thyself.

Douglas: I fear thou art another counterfeit;
And yet, in faith, thou bearest thee like a king;
But mine I am sure thou art, who'er thou be,
And thus I win thee. 15

[They fight, the King being in danger.]

Re-enter the PRINCE.

Prince: Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like
Never to hold it up again. The spirits
Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms; 20
It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee,
Who never promiseth but he means to pay.

[They fight; Douglas flies.]

Cheerly, my lord: how fares your Grace?
Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent,
And so hath Clifton. I'll to Clifton straight. 25

King: Stay, and breathe awhile.
Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion;
And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my life,
In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me. 30

Prince: O God, they did me too much injury
That ever said I heark'ned for your death!
If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting hand of Douglas over you,
Which would have been as speedy in your end 35
As all the poisonous potions in the world,
And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

King: Make up to Clifton, I'll to Sir Nicholas Gawsey.

[Exit.]

Act 5, Scene 4

Turn over for Question 9

TENNESSEE WILLIAMS: A Streetcar Named Desire

- 9 Either (a) 'All the characters are guilty.'

Discuss the ways in which Williams presents the characters of the play in the light of this comment.

- Or (b) Comment closely on the following passage, considering ways in which Williams develops tension between Blanche and Stanley.

Blanche: How do I look?

Content removed due to copyright restrictions.

Content removed due to copyright restrictions.

Stanley: Your sister and I are having a little talk.

Scene 2

BLANK PAGE

Copyright Acknowledgements:

Question 2b	© Seamus Heaney; A Chow from District and Circle ; Faber & Faber; 2006.
Question 3b	© Allen Curnow; Country School from Songs of Ourselves ; Foundation Books; 2005.
Question 4b	© Nervous Conditions . © 1988 Tsitsi Dangarembga. Reproduced by permission of Ayeibia Clarke Publishing.
Question 5b	© E M Forster; A Passage to India ; The Provost and Scholars of King's College, Cambridge and The Society of Authors.
Question 6b	© Rohinton Mistry; Of White Hairs and Cricket from Stories of Ourselves ; Cambridge University Press; 2008.
Question 7b	© Reprinted with the permission of Scribner, a Division of Simon & Schuster, Inc, from EQUUS by Peter Schaffer. Copyright © 1973, 1974 by Peter Schaffer; copyright renewed 2001, 2002 by Peter Schaffer, Penguin Books Ltd and MacNaughton Lord.

Permission to reproduce items where third-party owned material protected by copyright is included has been sought and cleared where possible. Every reasonable effort has been made by the publisher (UCLES) to trace copyright holders, but if any items requiring clearance have unwittingly been included, the publisher will be pleased to make amends at the earliest possible opportunity.

Cambridge International Examinations is part of the Cambridge Assessment Group. Cambridge Assessment is the brand name of University of Cambridge Local Examinations Syndicate (UCLES), which is itself a department of the University of Cambridge.