

Cambridge International AS & A Level

LITERATURE IN ENGLISH

9695/22

Paper 2 Prose and Unseen

February/March 2022

2 hours

You must answer on the enclosed answer booklet.

You will need: Answer booklet (enclosed)

INSTRUCTIONS

- Answer two questions in total:
 - Section A: answer one question.
 - Section B: answer one question.
- Follow the instructions on the front cover of the answer booklet. If you need additional answer paper, ask the invigilator for a continuation booklet.
- Dictionaries are not allowed.

INFORMATION

- The total mark for this paper is 50.
- All questions are worth equal marks.

This document has 16 pages. Any blank pages are indicated.

Section A: Prose

Answer one question from this section.

IAN McEWAN: Atonement

- 1 Either (a) Discuss the presentation of Paul Marshall, considering his role in the novel.
Or (b) Comment closely on McEwan's presentation of Robbie in the following passage.

Beyond the compass were his copies of Auden's Poems and Housman's A Shropshire Lad.

Content removed due to copyright restrictions.

There were application forms, twenty pages long, and thick, densely printed admission handbooks from Edinburgh and London whose methodical, exacting prose seemed to be a foretaste of a new kind of academic rigour.

(from Part 1 Chapter 8)

NGŪGĪ WA THIONG'O: Petals of Blood

- 2 Either (a) Discuss ways in which Ngũgĩ presents some of the changes to Ilmorog as the novel progresses.
- Or (b) Comment closely on ways in which Ngũgĩ presents Munira's thoughts and feelings in the following passage.

He thought he must have been born or conceived under Capricorn.

Content removed due to copyright restrictions.

Content removed due to copyright restrictions.

For a time Munira was intrigued by her and almost forgot the pain of being possessed with Wanja.

(from Chapter 11)

Stories of Ourselves, Volume 2

- 3 Either (a) Compare ways in which the writers of two stories create a sense of horror.
- Or (b) Comment closely on ways in which Wharton presents Hartley, the narrator, in the following passage from The Lady's Maid's Bell.

It was the autumn after I had the typhoid. I'd been three months in hospital, and when I came out I looked so weak and tottery that the two or three ladies I applied to were afraid to engage me. Most of my money was gone, and after I'd boarded for two months, hanging about the employment-agencies, and answering any advertisement that looked any way respectable, I pretty nearly lost heart, for fretting hadn't made me fatter, and I didn't see why my luck should ever turn. It did though – or I thought so at the time. A Mrs Railton, a friend of the lady that first brought me out to the States, met me one day and stopped to speak to me: she was one that had always a friendly way with her. She asked me what ailed me to look so white, and when I told her, 'Why, Hartley,' says she, 'I believe I've got the very place for you. Come in to-morrow and we'll talk about it.'

The next day, when I called, she told me the lady she'd in mind was a niece of hers, a Mrs Brympton, a youngish lady, but something of an invalid, who lived all the year round at her country-place on the Hudson, owing to not being able to stand the fatigue of town life.

'Now, Hartley,' Mrs Railton said, in that cheery way that always made me feel things must be going to take a turn for the better – 'now understand me; it's not a cheerful place I'm sending you to. The house is big and gloomy; my niece is nervous, vapourish; her husband – well, he's generally away; and the two children are dead. A year ago I would as soon have thought of shutting a rosy active girl like you into a vault; but you're not particularly brisk yourself just now, are you? and a quiet place, with country air and wholesome food and early hours, ought to be the very thing for you. Don't mistake me,' she added, for I suppose I looked a trifle downcast; 'you may find it dull but you won't be unhappy. My niece is an angel. Her former maid, who died last spring, had been with her twenty years and worshipped the ground she walked on. She's a kind mistress to all, and where the mistress is kind, as you know, the servants are generally good-humoured, so you'll probably get on well enough with the rest of the household. And you're the very woman I want for my niece: quiet, well-mannered, and educated above your station. You read aloud well, I think? That's a good thing; my niece likes to be read to. She wants a maid that can be something of a companion: her last was, and I can't say how she misses her. It's a lonely life ... Well, have you decided?'

'Why, ma'am,' I said, 'I'm not afraid of solitude.'

'Well, then, go; my niece will take you on my recommendation. I'll telegraph her at once and you can take the afternoon train. She has no one to wait on her at present, and I don't want you to lose any time.'

I was ready enough to start, yet something in me hung back; and to gain time I asked, 'And the gentleman, ma'am?'

'The gentleman's almost always away, I tell you,' said Mrs Railton, quick-like – 'and when he's there,' says she suddenly, 'you've only to keep out of his way.'

I took the afternoon train and got out at D——station at about four o'clock. A groom in a dog-cart was waiting, and we drove off at a smart pace. It was a dull October day, with rain hanging close overhead, and by the time we turned into Brympton Place woods the daylight was almost gone. The drive wound through the woods for a mile or two, and came out on a gravel court shut in with thickets of tall black-looking shrubs. There were no lights in the windows, and the house did look a bit gloomy.

I had asked no questions of the groom, for I never was one to get my notion of new masters from their other servants: I prefer to wait and see for myself. But I could tell by the look of everything that I had got into the right kind of house, and that things were done handsomely. A pleasant-faced cook met me at the back door and called the house-maid to show me up to my room. 'You'll see madam later,' she said. 'Mrs Brympton has a visitor.'

I hadn't fancied Mrs Brympton was a lady to have many visitors, and somehow the words cheered me. I followed the house-maid upstairs, and saw, through a door on the upper landing, that the main part of the house seemed well furnished, with dark panelling and a number of old portraits. Another flight of stairs led us up to the servants' wing. It was almost dark now, and the house-maid excused herself for not having brought a light. 'But there's matches in your room,' she said, 'and if you go careful you'll be all right. Mind the step at the end of the passage. Your room is just beyond.'

(from The Lady's Maid's Bell)

MARK TWAIN: The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn

- 4 Either (a) Discuss ways in which Twain presents the river, considering its significance in the novel.
- Or (b) Comment closely on Twain's presentation of Huck's relationship with his father in the following passage.

Well, pretty soon the old man was up and around again, and then he went for Judge Thatcher in the courts to make him give up that money, and he went for me, too, for not stopping school. He caught me a couple of times and thrashed me, but I went to school just the same, and dodged him or out-run him most of the time. I didn't want to go to school much, before, but I reckoned I'd go now to spite pap. That law trial was a slow business; appeared like they warn't ever going to get started on it; so every now and then I'd borrow two or three dollars off of the judge for him, to keep from getting a cowhiding. Every time he got money he got drunk; and every time he got drunk he raised Cain around town; and every time he raised Cain he got jailed. He was just suited – this kind of thing was right in his line. 5

He got to hanging around the widow's too much, and so she told him at last, that if he didn't quit using around there she would make trouble for him. Well, wasn't he mad? He said he would show who was Huck Finn's boss. So he watched out for me one day in the spring, and caught me, and took me up the river about three mile, in a skiff, and crossed over to the Illinois shore where it was woody and there warn't no houses but an old log hut in a place where the timber was so thick you couldn't find it if you didn't know where it was. 15

He kept me with him all the time, and I never got a chance to run off. We lived in that old cabin, and he always locked the door and put the key under his head, nights. He had a gun which he had stole, I reckon, and we fished and hunted, and that was what we lived on. Every little while he locked me in and went down to the store, three miles, to the ferry, and traded fish and game for whisky and fetched it home and got drunk and had a good time, and licked me. The widow she found out where I was, by-and-by, and she sent a man over to try to get hold of me, but pap drove him off with the gun, and it warn't long after that till I was used to being where I was, and liked it, all but the cowhide part. 20

It was kind of lazy and jolly, laying off comfortable all day, smoking and fishing, and no books nor study. Two months or more run along, and my clothes got to be all rags and dirt, and I didn't see how I'd ever got to like it so well at the widow's, where you had to wash, and eat on a plate, and comb up, and go to bed and get up regular, and be forever bothering over a book and have old Miss Watson pecking at you all the time. I didn't want to go back no more. I had stopped cussing, because the widow didn't like it; but now I took to it again because pap hadn't no objections. It was pretty good times up in the woods there, take it all around. 25

But by-and-by pap got too handy with his hick'ry, and I couldn't stand it. I was all over welts. He got to going away so much, too, and locking me in. Once he locked me in and was gone three days. It was dreadful lonesome. I judged he had got drowned and I wasn't ever going to get out any more. I was scared. I made up my mind I would fix up some way to leave there. I had tried to get out of that cabin many a time, but I couldn't find no way. There warn't a window to it big enough for a dog to get through. I couldn't get up the chimbly, it was too narrow. The door was thick solid oak slabs. Pap was pretty careful not to leave a knife or anything in the cabin when he was away; I reckon I had hunted the place over as much as a hundred times; well, I was 'most all the time at it, because it was about the only way to put in the time. 35

40

45

(from Chapter 6)

TURN OVER FOR SECTION B.

Section B: Unseen

Answer one question from this section.

Either

- 5 Comment closely on the following extract, considering the presentation of the meeting between the three characters.

Consider the writer's choice of language, dialogue and dramatic methods in your answer.

	[THE GIRL stands rigid. The figure of a SOLDIER appears on the other side of the stile. His cap is tucked into his belt, his hair is bright in the sunshine; he is lean, wasted, brown, and laughing.]
Soldier:	Daisy! Daisy! Hallo, old pretty girl!
	[THE GIRL does not move, barring the way, as it were.]	5
The Girl:	Hallo, Jack! [Softly] I got things to tell you.
Soldier:	What sort o' things, this lovely day? Why, I got things that'd take me years to tell. Have you missed me, Daisy?
The Girl:	You been so long.
Soldier:	So I 'ave. It's a way they 'ave in the Army. I said when I got out of it I'd laugh. Like as the sun itself I used to think of you, Daisy, when the crumps ¹ was comin' over, and the wind was up. D'you remember that last night in the wood? 'Come back and marry me quick, Jack.' Well, here I am – got me pass to heaven. No more fightin' no more drillin', no more sleepin' rough. We can get married now, Daisy. We can live soft an' 'appy. Give us a kiss, my dear.	10
The Girl	[Drawing back]: No.
Soldier	[Blankly]: Why not?
	[THE MAN, with a swift movement, steps along the hedge to THE GIRL's side.]	20
The Man:	That's why, soldier.
Soldier	[Leaping over the stile]: Who are you, Pompey? The sun don't shine in your inside, do it? Who is he, Daisy?
The Girl:	My man.
Soldier:	Your – man! Well, mate! So you've been through it, too. I'm laughin' this mornin' as luck will 'ave it. Ah! I can see your knife.	25
The Man	[Who has half-drawn his knife]: Don't laugh at me , I tell you.
Soldier:	Not at you, not at you. [He looks from one to the other.] I'm laughin' at things in general. Where did you get it, mate?
The Man	[Watchfully]: Through the lung.	30
Soldier:	Think o' that! An' I never was touched. Four years an' never was touched. An' so you've come an' took my girl! Nothin' doin'! Ha! [Again he looks from one to the other – then away] Well! The world's before me! [He laughs] I'll give you Daisy for a lung protector.
The Man	[Fiercely]: You won't. I've took her.	35
Soldier:	That's all right, then. You keep 'er. I've got a laugh in me you can't put out, black as you look! Good-bye, little Daisy!
	[THE GIRL makes a movement towards him.]

The Man:	Don't touch 'im! [THE GIRL stands hesitating, and suddenly bursts into tears.]	40
Soldier:	Look 'ere, mate; shake 'ands! I don't want to see a girl cry, this day of all, with the sun shinin'. I seen too much of sorrer. You and me've been at the back of it. We've 'ad our whack. Shake!
The Man:	Who are you kiddin'? You never loved 'er!
Soldier	[After a long moment's pause]: Oh! I thought I did.	45
The Man:	I'll fight you for her. [He drops his knife.]
Soldier	[Slowly]: Mate, you done your bit, an' I done mine. It's took us two ways, seemin'ly.
The Girl	[Pleading]: Jim!	50
The Man	[With clenched fists]: I don't want 'is charity. I only want what I can take.
Soldier:	Daisy, which of us will you 'ave?
The Girl	[Covering her face]: Oh! Him!
Soldier:	You see, mate! Put your 'ands down. There's nothin' for it but a laugh. You an' me know that. Laugh, mate!	55
The Man:	You blasted – [THE GIRL springs to him and stops his mouth.]
Soldier:	It's no use, mate. I can't do it. I said I'd laugh to-day, and laugh I will. I've come through that, an' all the stink of it; I've come through sorrow. Never again! Cheerio, mate! The sun's a-shinin'! [He turns away.]	60
The Girl:	Jack, don't think too 'ard of me!
Soldier	[Looking back]: No fear, my dear! Enjoy your fancy! So long! Bless you both!	65

¹*crumps*: explosions

Or

- 6 Comment closely on the presentation of the relationship between the narrator and her husband Tom in the following passage.

Consider the writer's choice of language, characterisation and narrative methods in your answer.

Still, I guess hardly any husband and wife agree on anything.

You take Tom and me, though, and you'd think we were made for each other. It seems like we feel just the same about everything. That is, almost everything. The things we don't agree on are little things that don't matter. Like music. Tom is wild about jazz and blues and dance music. He adores Irving Berlin and Gershwin and Jack Kearns. He's always after those kind of things on the radio and I just want serious, classical things like 'Humoresque' and 'Indian Love Lyrics'. And then there's shows. Tom is crazy over Ed Wynn and I can't see anything in him. Just the way he laughs at his own jokes is enough to spoil him for me. If I'm going to spend time and money on a theater I want to see something worth while – The Fool or Lightnin'. 5

And things to eat. Tom insists, or that is he did insist, on a great big breakfast – fruit, cereal, eggs, toast, and coffee. All I want is a little fruit and dry toast and coffee. I think it's a great deal better for a person. So that's one habit I broke Tom of, was big breakfasts. And another thing he did when we were first married was to take off his shoes as soon as he got home from the office and put on bedroom slippers. I believe a person ought not to get sloppy just because they're married. 10

But the worst of all was pajamas! What's the difference, Tommie? Helen and Arthur don't mind. And I think it's kind of funny, you being so old-fashioned. I mean Tom had always worn a nightgown till I made him give it up. And it was a struggle, believe me! I had to threaten to leave him if he didn't buy pajamas. He certainly hated it. And now he's mad at me for telling, aren't you, Tommie? I just couldn't help it. I think it's so funny in this day and age. I hope Arthur doesn't wear them; nightgowns, I mean. You don't, do you, Arthur? I knew you didn't. 15

Oh, are you waiting for me? What did you say, Arthur? Two diamonds¹? Let's see what that means. When Tom makes an original bid of two it means he hasn't got the tops. I wonder – but of course you couldn't have the – heavens! What am I saying! I guess I better just keep still and pass. 20

But what was I going to tell you? Something about – oh, did I tell you about Tom being an author? I had no idea he was talented that way till after we were married and I was unpacking his old papers and things and came across a poem he'd written, the saddest, mushiest poem! Of course it was a long time ago he wrote it; it was dated four years ago, long before he met me, so it didn't make me very jealous, though it was about some other girl. You didn't know I found it, did you, Tommie? 25

But that wasn't what I refer to. He's written a story, too, and he's sent it to four different magazines and they all sent it back. I tell him though, that that doesn't mean anything. When you see some of the things the magazines do print, why, it's an honor to have them not like yours. The only thing is that Tom worked so hard over it and sat up nights writing and rewriting, it's kind of a disappointment to have them turn it down. 30

¹*diamonds*: refers to the card game they are playing

BLANK PAGE

Permission to reproduce items where third-party owned material protected by copyright is included has been sought and cleared where possible. Every reasonable effort has been made by the publisher (UCLES) to trace copyright holders, but if any items requiring clearance have unwittingly been included, the publisher will be pleased to make amends at the earliest possible opportunity.

To avoid the issue of disclosure of answer-related information to candidates, all copyright acknowledgements are reproduced online in the Cambridge Assessment International Education Copyright Acknowledgements Booklet. This is produced for each series of examinations and is freely available to download at www.cambridgeinternational.org after the live examination series.

Cambridge Assessment International Education is part of Cambridge Assessment. Cambridge Assessment is the brand name of the University of Cambridge Local Examinations Syndicate (UCLES), which is a department of the University of Cambridge.