Text A

An extract from an account from 1769 of a tour of the Highlands of Scotland by a writer named Thomas Pennant

Most of the antient sports of the Highlanders, such as archery, hunting, fowling and fishing, are now disused; those retained are, throwing the putting-stone, or stone of strength as they call it, which occasions an emulation who can throw a weighty one the farthest. Throwing the penny-stone, which answer to our coits¹. The shinty, or the striking of a ball of wood or of hair: this game is played between two parties in a large plain, and furnished with clubs; which-ever side strikes it first to their own goal wins the match. 5

The amusements by their fire-sides were, the telling of tales, the wildest and most extravagant imaginable: musick was another: in former times, the harp was the favorite instrument, covered with leather and strung with wire, but at present is quite lost. Bagpipes are supposed to have been introduced by the Danes; this is very doubtful, but shall be taken notice of in the next volume: the oldest are played with the mouth, the loudest and most ear piercing of any wind musick; the other, played with the fingers only, are of Irish origin; the first suited the genius of this warlike people, roused their courage to battle, alarmed them when secure, and collected them when scattered. This instrument is become scarce since the abolition of the power of the chieftains, and the more industrious turn of the common people. 10 15

The Trump or Mouth Harp would not merit the mention among the Highland instruments of musick, if it was not to prove its origin and antiquity: one made of gilt brass having been found in Norway, deposited in an urn.

Vocal musick was much in vogue amongst them, and their songs were chiefly in praise of their antient heroes. I was told that they still have fragments of the story of Fingal and others, which they carrol as they go along. 20

¹*coits*: a game in which people throw rings made of metal, rope or rubber to land over an upright spike or stick. Modern spelling is 'quoits'.
