Question 3

Refer to Fig.3, a news item about the Falkland Islands.

Falkland Islands anticipates biggest ever cruise season

The Falkland Islands is anticipating a growth of nearly 9% in cruise ship visitors, which would make it the destination's most successful season to date. Almost 68 000 cruise ship passengers are expected to visit the Falkland Islands during the summer season between October 2008 and April 2009.

This significant increase in planned visitor arrivals is part of a larger growth pattern. The latest figures indicate that passenger numbers have grown by an average of 15% per year for eight consecutive seasons, comparing favourably with global growth of just 8% per year. The capacity for next season has increased and developments in infrastructure for the new season include a new shelter erected at the Jetty Visitors Centre in the capital, Stanley, making it more comfortable for cruise visitors while they are waiting for their tours.

The season this year starts on October 20 with a visit from the NG Endeavour, and ends on April 7. Vessels calling at the Falklands include Star Princess, Norwegian Sun and Minerva. Each year thousands of tourists make the journey to the Falklands onboard a cruise ship or expedition vessel. This increasingly popular method of travel allows people to visit many sites that remain largely inaccessible to land-based tourists in the Falklands, all from the comfort and safety of a world-class vessel.

A wide variety of shore excursions and tours are available for passengers to experience the unique wildlife and fascinating history of the Islands. These include a trip to Bluff Cove Lagoon, where visitors can stroll along the white sandy beach, home to 1 000 breeding pairs of Gentoo penguins and a growing colony of King penguins and chicks, or watch the sea lions and dolphins often seen swimming in the surf. Historical tours are also popular with cruise visitors, who can visit the sites made famous by the battles of the 1982 conflict, such as Mount Tumbledown and Wireless Ridge.

Tourism is the Falklands' fastest growing industry and the second largest industry behind fisheries in terms of contribution to GDP (gross domestic product). The industry is experiencing strong annual growth in visitor numbers from the UK primarily due to the increased popularity of Antarctic cruise ship tourism. Land-based tourism is also growing, along with the number of independent travellers visiting the Islands. Many choose to combine their Falklands itinerary with a stopover in South America. These individuals range from busy professionals to ornithologists, biologists, wildlife enthusiasts, photographers, as well as recreational anglers and hikers with a sense of adventure. Key activities in the Islands include wildlife excursions, recreational fishing for sea trout, battlefield tours, hiking, wreck diving, photography, and general wildlife watching.

(c) With reference to Fig. 3 explain three pieces of evidence to support the view that the Falkland Islands are in the 'Development Stage' of destination evolution.
