Cambridge Zoo is expanding its activities to bring in more visitors. The Zoo Director has decided to introduce a website for visitors that enables several functions to be carried out. Tickets can be bought in advance to be used with a bar code reader linked to an automatic gate.

In the visitor centre there is an expert system that can be used to identify animals.

A new building will house animals who hunt in the daytime and at night. The director wants it to be open in time for the peak visitor season. The new animal house will have a computer controlled environment.

1 (a) Explain the advantages to the zoo of allowing visitors to buy tickets in advance.
