Paper 3 (Listening – Core), maximum raw mark 30

This mark scheme is published as an aid to teachers and candidates, to indicate the requirements of the examination. It shows the basis on which Examiners were instructed to award marks. It does not indicate the details of the discussions that took place at an Examiners' meeting before marking began, which would have considered the acceptability of alternative answers.

Mark schemes should be read in conjunction with the question paper and the Principal Examiner Report for Teachers.

Cambridge will not enter into discussions about these mark schemes.

Cambridge is publishing the mark schemes for the May/June 2015 series for most Cambridge IGCSE®, Cambridge International A and AS Level components and some Cambridge O Level components.

R1 Question 1

(a) Which programme do they decide to watch together?

(b) What time should the news be on this evening?

(M and F – married couple in their 30s)

M *There's a really good programme on TV tonight.

F Oh, do you mean the new one – The Nature Show? I want to watch that.

M Actually I was thinking about another one – it's called My Family – it's supposed to be really funny.

F Well, I could do with a laugh, so let's see that, shall we? And I guess you'll want to see the ten o'clock news afterwards, won't you?

M Yes, but it'll be later tonight because there's a football match on – and that doesn't start until eight forty five.

F Oh, you're right. It's supposed to be on after the match, at ten twenty. But it says here that it depends on what time the match finishes...**

R1 Question 2

(a) Which exhibition is closed to visitors at the moment?

(b) Where is the new museum café?

(recorded message, F speaker, 40s)

F *Thank you for calling the Museum of Discovery. We are open from Tuesday to Sunday, from nine thirty until six forty five pm. The new exhibition on space travel is proving very popular – please book ahead to avoid disappointment. And we apologise that the science exhibition is not available until the end of the month, due to heating problems. Finally, the cafe has now reopened. It's moved from the first floor, next to the shop, and is now located beside the entrance. We look forward to seeing you there.**

R1 Question 3

(a) Which part of his project is the student going to work on next?

(b) Who will he ask to help him with the last section of his project?

(F teacher, 40s; M student, late teens)

F *I've had a look at your project, Dan – and it's looking good. I just think the introduction needs a bit more information in it.

M I know. I'm going to do that later. Do you think the graphs are OK?

F They're very helpful, I think. You could make them slightly bigger, though.

M No problem. That's easy, so I'll do that straight away. I also need to interview someone so I can write about them in the final part, but I'm not sure who to ask.

F How about someone in your family – your dad, maybe?

M He would be good, but he's away this week. But my uncle's here tomorrow. I'll see if he can do it!**

R1 Question 4

(a) What must students paint for this year's art exhibition?

(b) What two things must each student write on the back of their picture?

(M speaker, teacher, 40s)

M *Listen everyone, I want to tell you about the college art competition. I know lots of you entered last year, and we still have some of your amazing pictures of islands on show in the hall. We had a few good suggestions for this year's topic, and although lots of you were keen on doing buildings, we've gone for trees. Your picture can be any size, for a change. Don't forget to put your telephone number and postcode on the other side of the picture too. We decided it's better not to have your name or class number there, so the judges don't know who did each one!**

R1 Question 5

You will hear a conservation expert giving a talk about some islands off the west coast of Scotland, called St Kilda. Listen to the talk and complete the details below. Write one or two words only in each gap.

You will hear the talk twice.

(F speaker, 30s–40s)

V1 * Hello and thank you for coming. I'm here to tell you about the group of islands called St Kilda, which are sometimes described as 'the islands at the edge of the world'. St Kilda is located in the North Atlantic, 41 miles west of the island of North Uist in the Outer Hebrides, which is off the west coast of Scotland. St Kilda is formed from the rim of an ancient volcano, and it's the most remote part of the British Isles. Comprising four islands, as well as several sea stacks, St Kilda is truly spectacular.

It is one of only 29 locations to be awarded 'mixed' World Heritage Status in recognition of both its natural and cultural significance. It's the most complete and intact landscape of its type in Europe.

Now uninhabited, St Kilda was home to a community of islanders for thousands of years, before the final 36 people were evacuated in 1930. It's remarkable to think that people lived there at all, if you consider how remote it is, the difficult landscape and the challenging weather. But people did, and at its peak there were up to 200 people living on the islands. They survived not on a diet of fish, as you might expect, but on seabirds, which were caught and used for food, and for much more. The meat was dried and stored, and the eggs were eaten. Their oil provided fuel for lamps, and their feathers were stored and sold to any visitors who came. Every part of the bird was used – the beaks became brooch pins, the bones were turned into needles, the skins were used to make shoes. It's hard to imagine that people in Britain were still living like this around 85 years ago. They also managed to farm a few crops, which were dried in storage chambers built out of stone. About 1,400 of these still remain.

Nowadays, the island is owned by an organisation called The National Trust. They have volunteers staying there, and they organise working visits to the islands, for example to repair walls and preserve the wildlife and their natural habitat. The islands are home to unique sub-species of mice and wrens, both of which are larger than those found on the mainland. Wild sheep are the focus of one of the world's longest running mammal research programmes. Dogs and cats aren't permitted on the islands, and great care is taken to ensure that no rats are found in supplies which arrive by boat.

The majority of visitors to the islands arrive by sea, and the journey time can be at least six or seven hours from the Outer Hebrides. A place named Village Bay has the only jetty where boats can come in, although if the wind is blowing the wrong way, this would be impossible, so, a boat would have to turn round and sail all the way back again!**

TRACK 4

R1 Question 6

You will hear six people talking about fame. For each speaker 1 to 6, choose from the list, A to G, which opinion each speaker expresses. Write the letter in the box. Use each letter only once. There is one extra letter which you do not need to use.

*Speaker 1 F, 20s

I'd love to be famous one day. I've always been into singing and can imagine myself on stage in front of thousands of screaming fans, and hearing my records played all day long on the radio and on TV. I've never fooled myself into thinking that it'd be easy though – you have to work really hard if you want to be successful. Also, being in the public eye all the time must be so difficult – imagine just going out to the shops and strangers taking photos of you all the time. For me, that would be the real down side to it.

Speaker 2 M, 30s

It's such a great thing if you've got real talent, and even greater if people know who you are because of it. That's what so many kids dream of! But I don't think they realise how it can affect the way your life turns out – in many cases not in a positive way. It's really hard for child stars to know what normal life is like, and they just don't get a chance to grow up properly. And as an adult, they'll always be remembered for what they did years back – probably criticised for it too! In fact, I'd say that the negatives outweigh the positives, as far as being famous is concerned.

Speaker 3 F, 40s

When I was growing up I had posters of all my favourite singers and actors all over my bedroom walls. I was always trying to be like them! Although I must admit that these days, famous people don't always behave in the best way, I still think that kids can get a lot out of having a person like this to look up to. They see how they deal with stress, how to be confident, and hopefully learn how not to do some things too! Anyway, I think it gives them a reason to try to succeed in life, whatever it is they want to do!

Speaker 4 M, 30s

One of my all-time favourite TV programmes was a comedy that was on when I was growing up – there was a boy in it who I thought was brilliant. Everyone used to say that he'd never be as good when he grew up, but he's still acting, and getting some good roles too – he just seems like such a normal person really! These days it's so much easier for people to get a taste of fame – all you have to do is post a video of yourself online and before you know it you'll be getting thousands of hits and your name is everywhere! It might not last, but that's the way it is nowadays!

Page 9	Mark Scheme	Syllabus	Paper
	Cambridge IGCSE – May/June 2015	0510	33

Speaker 5 F, 20s

I belong to a drama group – actually I've always loved acting. We have a great laugh together, and it's a fantastic way to put your troubles to one side. But every time we put on a play it's the thought that we might be noticed, and that people might find out about us, that really gets us excited and makes us do our best. Some people say that if you can sing, play an instrument, or get up on stage, then you've got the best chance of achieving fame. But actually, I think anyone can, no matter what you do, as long as you try hard and show a bit of passion for what you do.

Speaker 6 M, 20s

I think everyone would admit that at some time in their life they've dreamed about being famous. And you can see that lots of people want exactly that if you look at the number of videos and pictures that people post of themselves online. I think there's more to it than that, though – you've got to be in the right place at the right time, and know the right people. Those lucky ones that do just that have got everything. OK, there are some negative aspects, but you'd put up with these to be able to enjoy all the benefits, wouldn't you?*

Pause 00'20"

R1 Question 7

You will hear a student interviewing a woman who started her own bread-making business. Listen to their conversation and look at the questions. For each question, choose the correct answer, A, B or C, and put a tick (✓) in the appropriate box.

You will hear the interview twice.

M (student about 18); F (mid 20s)

M *First of all, I'd like to thank you for coming to our college today. We're really looking forward to finding out more about your experience of setting up your own business, as it's something that a few of us here would love to do in the future.

F Thanks for inviting me! I hope I'll be able to give you some useful information.

M OK. Well, would you like to start by briefly telling us why you decided to set up your own business?

Page 10	Mark Scheme	Syllabus	Paper
	Cambridge IGCSE – May/June 2015	0510	33

- F Sure. So, I've always loved freshly-baked bread, and I used to make my own whenever I had time. My dad taught me how to do it actually! Then I started going to an evening class in baking – the person who lived next door to me asked me to go to it with her. Anyway, the tutor there really liked what I did, and that was what gave me the confidence to set up my own business.
- M How long ago was that?
- F Just two and a half years ago, actually. So, I haven't been going for that long.
- M Did you always think you'd have your own business?
- F No, far from it! When I was at school I was really interested in architecture – and I thought I'd go on to study that at university. But in the end I did a degree in graphic design. It was so hard to find work in that area though. Then, when I started baking seriously, I did an online course in business management in my spare time, to help me get going.
- M Did you have to borrow a lot of money to start the business?
- F I did have to get a small loan, yes. I went to the bank, fully expecting them to tell me to come back in a few years when I was older and more experienced – I was only in my early twenties, to be fair. But actually, they took my business plan seriously, and made some really useful suggestions. I was quite surprised by their attitude.
- M Something lots of us want to know is whether you found it was easy to begin with.
- F It was exciting, but I wouldn't say that it was easy. I put in a lot of hours to begin with, and didn't give myself much of a salary for the first couple of months, as I wanted to pay back the loan as fast as possible. It was deciding how and where to publicise the business that turned out to be most challenging, though.
- M And now, what do you like most about running your own business?
- F It's great being your own boss, to be honest, and I've got some really good people working with me now. I only employ three others – all part-time – but we get along very well together. That's what I get more satisfaction from, which surprised me – I always thought I'd enjoy the interaction with customers the most. But don't get me wrong – that's something I really value too.
- M What are your plans for the future?
- F Well, we're about to move into another building – we need a bit more space to work in. I'm worried about being over-ambitious though, so I'm going to wait for a year or so before introducing more types of breads and other baked goods. Several people say I should try to get a deal with a large retailer. But I value my independence, to be honest!
- M Last year you won an award for the best new food business. What was that like?
- F That was an incredible experience. One of my customers nominated me, and I really didn't expect to win, because the other people in the competition were amazing. That was the high point, actually, getting to know some of them and seeing what they'd achieved. Of course it was nice to get first prize – five thousand pounds – and it was fun appearing on a radio programme to talk about my business. I've never done that before!

Page 11	Mark Scheme	Syllabus	Paper
	Cambridge IGCSE – May/June 2015	0510	33

M It sounds really good. I'd just like to ask you one more question, if that's ok. If someone said to you that they were thinking of setting up a business now, what would be your top tip for them?

F Well, I'd have lots of suggestions actually! It's important to have some financial security. But more than anything, I'd say to know exactly what you hope to achieve. You don't need to come up with something totally new – but whatever your idea is, you must believe in it, and be prepared to work hard at it!

M That's great. Thank you so much for coming in today – it's been really interesting talking to you.

F My pleasure.**
