[Total: 40]

SOURCE A: A cartoon published in an American newspaper in 1972. The word Monsieur means 'Mr' in French.

SOURCE B: From a conversation between President Johnson and his biographer in 1970.

I knew from the start that if I abandoned what I really love – the Great Society – in order to get involved with that wretched war on the other side of the world, then I would lose everything at home: all my programmes. All my hopes to feed the hungry and shelter the homeless. But if I left that war, and let the communists take over South Vietnam, then I would be seen as a coward and my nation would be seen as an appeaser. We would find it impossible to accomplish anything for anybody anywhere on the entire globe.

Why must this nation fight in Vietnam and risk its power for the sake of a people so far away? We fight because we must fight if we are to live in a world where every country can shape its own destiny. Communist North Vietnam has attacked the independent nation of South Vietnam. Its object is total conquest.

We are there because we have a promise to keep. Since 1954, every American President has offered support to the people of South Vietnam to help them defend their independence. I wish to keep that promise. We are also there to strengthen world order. To leave South Vietnam to its fate would shake people's confidence in American commitment and promises. The result would be increased unrest and instability; retreating from Vietnam would not bring peace to the world.

SOURCE D: From a book, 'The Arrogance of Power' written by Senator Fulbright, an opponent of the Vietnam War, published 1966.

We are in a war to defend freedom but power has a way of undermining judgement. The idea of being responsible for world peace seems to have dazzled us. American military involvement in Vietnam may have more to do with American vanity than with helping our friends.

SOURCE E: A cartoon about the Vietnam War, published in the USA in 1971, showing Presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon. It is called 'The Blind Leading the Blind'.
