Sources for use with Section A.

Source 1: From evidence given by the United Democratic Front (UDF) to the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, 6 May 1998. Here the Commission is examining the founding of the UDF.

There is no doubt that UDF activists were inspired by the popular struggles of the 1950s, 1960s and 1970s. The UDF promised a democracy in which all races would be united and in which the desires of ordinary working people could be met.

The mission of the UDF was to raise mass support for the creation of a democracy. It aimed to achieve decent living conditions by forcing political change through mass struggle. The UDF decided to create local and regional organisations to enable it to achieve its vision. These organisations would express both the grievances and the aspirations of people drawn from the various sectors of the South African society. 5
10

The UDF was launched in 1983 with the support of about 600 organisations. The objective of the UDF was to translate the grievances and aspirations of the people into campaigns. The aim of these campaigns was to mobilise an ever-growing number of people, who belonged to various different alliances, into an active opposition to apartheid institutions. 15

Source 2: From a speech made by Nelson Mandela to the Youth Forum on HIV/AIDS, 22 September 2003.

Of all the challenges facing you, nothing looms larger than the threat posed by HIV/AIDS.

South Africans no longer need to focus on debates about the causes of AIDS, or on controversies about the relative effectiveness of medication. We are faced with the simple stark reality that HIV/AIDS threatens our future like nothing else has done for centuries. 20

The fight against AIDS will require each of us to play a role in order to defeat this enemy. We need to support the government in its plan to provide lifesaving treatment for all who need it. We need involvement in counselling and educational efforts aimed at preventing the spread of the pandemic. 25

We need a fundamental change of mind-set with regards to the way we speak and behave about sex and sexuality. Let us start by breaking the silence around the issue of HIV/AIDS. Shame and silence are as serious killers as the virus itself. Much of the progress we have made in this country in combating AIDS is due to the growing tide of speaking about HIV/AIDS publicly and clearly, and due to the growing public willingness to embrace and support those living with HIV/AIDS. 30

HIV/AIDS seriously threatens our future. But I want to leave you with a message of hope and positiveness. Once more our people, from all backgrounds, genders or age groups, will rally together to save our nation from destruction. 35
