Introduction

This was the first paper of the new specification for IAL Law. The paper exams many of the areas of substantive law from the specification. Most candidates attempted all questions with a number providing excellent responses using the problem based scenarios. Interpretation of command words for some questions needs to be improved upon. Candidates also need to make better use of appropriate case law and legislative provisions to enhance their answers.

General issues

Questions of 2 or 4 marks are asking candidates for points based answers which means they could receive a mark for every correct accurate point made in answering the question. Space provided for answers should inform candidates of the brevity of response required. Command words such as 'Give', 'Explain' and 'identify' gain marks for providing knowledge, explained examples and/or identification of specific legal concepts from the problems.

Questions worth 6, 10, 14 or 20 marks are asking candidates to provide an assessment of a legal issue or a problem given using a combination of appropriate legal knowledge combined with an assessment of the issue. Candidates answers are awarded a mark based on the level of response they display.

Analyse required candidates to weigh up a legal issue with accurate knowledge supported by either case law, legislative provision or legal theories, displaying developed reasoning and balance. 10, 14 and 20-mark answers required candidates to approach a legal problem with accurate knowledge supported by appropriate and relevant case law, legislative provision and legal theories and apply this to the scenario. Discussions of relevant issues needed to be well developed, with candidates showing where the evidence in the scenario supported legal authority and where it was lacking. Comparisons of conflicting evidence and legal arguments needed to be demonstrated by candidates with a balanced comparison and justified conclusions based on the case law/legislation.

Ouestion 1a

This was marked using a levels of response based mark scheme. The candidates' answers were assessed in their entirety and allocated a level based on where this best fitted the level descriptions.

The command word in this question was 'Analyse', which was looking for a detailed answer, identifying the relationships between the general rule on omissions and criminal law and the exceptions to that rule. There was no need for candidates to provide a conclusion.

A key word many candidates took insufficient notice of was 'why', indicating to candidates that to score high marks their responses should be show some justification for the general rule on omissions and a brief reason as to why the exceptions to this rule have been created.

For a level 1 candidate response a basic knowledge of omissions such as what the general rule is was sufficient to gain credit.

For a level 2 response (3 or 4 marks) this basic knowledge on omissions would be developed with examples of situations where criminal exceptions existed, for example some candidates made use of the short introductory text regarding failure to provide a breath sample, though this was not always used well.

For some level 3 response candidates needed to provide the general rule and go through a number of exceptions, justifying why criminal las has created these omissions. Better responses used the brief facts of cases such as R v Pittwood to explain why this situation was an exception. To gain 6 marks, candidates needed to explain briefly why the general rule on omissions exists, such as the difficulties of establishing liability where there are multiple defendants.

1 Failure to provide a breath sample to the police, when required to do so, is a crime. However, failing to report a crime you see taking place on the street is not a crime. (a) Analyse why the actus reus of some offences can be committed by omission. Actus-reus is one of the elements needed to complete a crime. It is the guilty act of the offender. Generally failure to not the defense. However, in certain situations omissions are said to hold people liable; Where a statute provides for it the componies ACL 2006 requires businesses to keep Anancial document and tender them at the end of the year. failure to do so will result in liability being Imposed. Where a person has a special relationship with another as in Gibbins and Prodor neglect of that person will result in liability being imposed. Where apperson has a voluntary assumption of care towards another as in stone and obbbinson; omission to give the best possible care is will result in liability being imposed. Where a person is under a contractual obligation as in Pitwood omission to parform their obligation will be an offense. Duty to avert danger by oness own doing as in Miller would result in an offense. Furthermore in a doctor patient relationship as in; Bland 1(a) the doctor is to do everything is his power to rure the potient or to diagnose the potient at an early stage. An omission to do so will result in the doctor being held liable for any injury caused

Examiner comments

This scored 5 marks – There is an excellent combination of case law which has a brief explanation of why it was regarded as an exception. The candidate states the general principle of exceptions in criminal law. For full marks, a brief justification as to why the general rule exists was needed.

Examiner tip

Make sure you read and understand all the command words in a question and check your answer regularly to make sure you stick rigidly to this.

A small number of well explained cases/legislation will gain high marks, it is about quality.

Question 1b

This was marked using a levels of response based mark scheme. The candidates' answers were assessed in their entirety and allocated a level based on where this best fitted the level descriptions.

The command word in this question was 'Evaluate', which was looking for an extended answer, identifying areas of law which were given and some which were not. Candidates needed to draw a conclusion based on the law, its application and evaluation, with use of the problem.

A key word many candidates took insufficient notice of was 'why', indicating to candidates that to score high marks their responses should be show some justification for the general rule on omissions treating Sue and Aaron differently. Some evaluation of the aims of sentencing in Sue's case would enhance the answer, though few candidates took this approach. Some candidates confused the law on negligence with that of criminal omissions. Others spent time looking at causation, which was not relevant to this question.

For level 1 candidates were able to give basic knowledge on the law of omissions and its relevance to the question. Candidates who attempted to apply the law of negligence were limited to this level, as the question was answered incorrectly.

For level 2 candidates were able to relate the law of omissions to both Sue and Aaron and distinguish in general terms the differences.

For level 3 candidates were able to relate the law of omissions to Sue and Aaron including relevant case law. At the top of this level distinctions to the legal differences between Sue and Aaron were shown using evidence.

For level 4 candidates were able to discuss why Aaron and Sue were treated differently, perhaps emphasising Aaron had no legal relationship to Ron and why criminal law accept no such responsibility. Some candidates were able to evaluate that perhaps Aaron had a moral rather than a legal duty. Some candidates hinted at issues regarding Sue's prison sentence but few looked at the wider issue of the law on omissions in this situation, namely to act as a method of keeping maintain high standards for those who are paid to protect the health and safety of the public.

In this situation, sue was under a contractual onligation to save Ron the omission to do was the reason oble for d aware of the surroundings. The omission to do her job, is the reason from died and as a result, she was prosecuted in PHWOOD, the Detendent was under a contractual agreement to close the gates of a railway line. Omission of his duty coosed a cart driver to get knocked by the train and die . The D was held liable. Thus, since this is a similar situation sue was prosecuted. Sue could also have been prosecuted under factual causation where Ron would not have died due to sue's recklessness. As in Paggett where a mon used his pregnant girlfriend as a shield in a gun fight and resulted in her and the baby getting killed. thowever, It can also be said that this encident to one of strict liability. Strict liability offences are offenses that do not require a mens-rea element. In shorrock. the D rented out his field , to unknown to him it was for a oad house parmy. The D was held liable as he should have known what his property was being used for. Similarly sue is under an obligation to save lives as she is on duty to watch over people at the local swimming pool. If this offence is one a smich llability sue's duty to look after the & people at the pool, being ineffective, she would obviously be prosecuted. However, Aaron may not have been prosecuted as he was a spectator and had no contractual agreement to sove anybodies life like sue did. so him not saying anything does not impose liability on him. I may have also faron may not have been prosecuted If he was a minor at the swimming pool. Courts take Into account various factors before prosecuting a person, like age, previous criminal tecoid, financial abilities or so. If Aaron was a minor, then the courts would not charge him with any offense bas he may not have been old enough to undersland. Or if he was within the ambit or reasonable age, the court will let him off with an absolute discharge by giving him a warning that he should tell people of any danger in his surrounding.

Examiner comments

This scored 8 marks – There is a good and balanced discussion with relevant case law regarding the distinction between Aaron and Sue's liability. However, strict liability and causation show a little confusion over the focus of the question. For full marks, a brief justification as to why the Aaron and Sue were treated differently and a conclusion as to whether the balance is correct. A discussion of what the law is seeking to achieve in Sue's situation would also gain higher marks.

Examiner tip

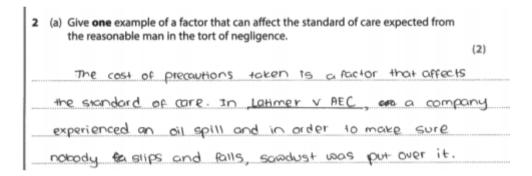

With this type of question, a simple way to think about the 'why' is to give reasons for and against the law developing in a particular way.

Question 2a

The command word is 'give' which requires candidates to give a one step, short answer.

This question is a points based one where the candidate needs to give one factor that would lower or raise the standard of the reasonable man in negligence, for 1 knowledge mark. For the other application mark the candidate then needs to give an example of a situation for the standard they have identified, ideally using a relevant case.

Many candidates struggled to gain any marks from this question even though it a straightforward concept when considering whether or the reasonable man has breached his duty of care. Some students were able to state what the effect of a factor might be in general with others able to gain marks for giving the law's position on defendants in certain situations, such as child defendants.

Examiner comments

This scored 2 marks – The candidate give's one example of a factor, cost of precautions and then gives an appropriate case and some explanation.

Examiner tip

Try and stick to the space provided for this style of question has answers only need to be short. When quoting a case, it will need a brief explanation that relates back to the question.

Question 2b

The command word is 'explain' which requires candidates to show understanding of the law through an explanation with application or relevant case law.

This question is a points based one where the candidate needs explain 2 rules regarding remoteness of damages for 2 knowledge marks. For the application marks the candidate then needs to give an example of a situation for the rule they have identified, ideally using a relevant case explanation.

Candidates were able to identify a rule and offer some brief general explanation case explanations were omitted.

(b) Explain two rules of the remoteness of damage concept in negligence.

In order to establish if a the damage has accured there are two tests as eausation - but for test and the foreseeability test. The but-for-test is as follows; did the breach or duty towards the claimant result in damage? Did the damage accur but-for-the breach? Barnett v Chelsea and kersigton Hospitals. The next test is if the damage accured was foreseable; The wagon Mound the damage need not be specifically foreseen but something of the sort in general would be sufficient; Jolley v Scrutton IBC

Examiner comments

This scored 4 marks – The candidate an explanation of the general principle and a rule with appropriate cases and some explanation, though this could have been more detailed.

Examiner tip

For an explain question a case per rule is sufficient if you briefly relate the facts of the case to the rule you are trying to show you understand.

Question 2c

This was marked using a levels of response based mark scheme. The candidates' answers were assessed in their entirety and allocated a level based on where this best fitted the level descriptions.

The command word in this question was 'Evaluate', which was looking for an extended answer, identifying areas of law which were given. Candidates needed to draw a conclusion based on the law, its application and evaluation, with use of the problem.

A key word many candidates took insufficient notice of was 'whether', indicating to candidates that to score high marks their responses should be show an assessment of the strengths and weaknesses of establishing all three duty tests. There were some excellent answers applying all three tests though other candidates failed to stick to the question, spending fruitless time on applying all the tests for negligence, such as breach. Some answers were generic and scored low marks.

For level 1 candidates were able to give basic knowledge on the law of duty of care. Candidates who simply quoted Donoghue v Stephenson and attempted to apply a general duty were often limited to this level, as this approach was expressly rejected by the incremental approach in Caparo v Dickman.

For level 2 candidates were able to relate one or more parts of the Caparo test to the scenario with limited application Najeeb's situation. Case law and points of law were often missing with a more generic approach taken.

For level 3 candidates were able to relate in detail one or more of the tests from Caparo, providing relevant case explanation and/or a discussion of the merits of whether or not a duty could be established between Najeeb and Emily.

For level 4 candidates the 3 elements of the Caparo test in detail with relevant cases explained and applied for each element. Better candidates were able to establish that the situation was reasonably foreseeable and that there was a close physical and legal relationship between Emily and Najeeb, due to the high levels of risk of the activity. They were also able to establish that that it was fair, just and reasonable to impose a duty on Emily. Better answers at this level were able to use their application of the law to for a reasoned judgment that Emily owed a duty.

fort a craimant to be successful in a craim for negligence, 3 propositions must be fulfilled, they were set out in Button V Islington; there must have been a duty of care towards the craimant, the praintiff must have breached the duty of care and as a result of the breach there must have been damage caused.

primary case is tonoghue v stevenson, Mrs. Donoghue sued the manufacturer of the ginger beer she drank due to there being a dead shoil in it and as a result she fell the sight of it. However, the principle in this case was manipulated, thus a 3 part test was reformed in Caparo v Dickman; the following must be fulfilled.

foreseability, proximity between the parties and whether it was fair, just and reasonable as to whether the Claimans is liable.

Firstly, in it must be established that it was foreseeable that a person in the colonant's position would have been injured. In Kent v Griffiths, it was reasonably foreseen that failure of the ambulance to arrive would result in the victim dying. However in Bourhill v Young, the plaintiff could not be held liable as it was not reasonably foregeable Argnan+ a lody on the road about be snocked and her baby would be still born due to an accident scenario coused by thatif foreseable the alaiment. Here, It is reasonably OPLYGE STEP a person was walking underneath the branch Emily was cutting down. Next, there must be sufficient proximity between the two parties. In Osmand v Ferguson, the police officers and the victim they were protecting had sufficient proximity. Here, Emily and Najeeb had sufficient proximity as she would have awed him a duty of make sure he was care in order in the process of her cutting down the branch and a person walking on the povement is someone whom she Hid one a duty to. Bithe third requirement to be fulfilled is if it is fair. reasonable to impose a duty on Emily. In South or Yorkshire, police officers are not Hill v Chief Constable held liable for a breach however this may not olasys be the case: MPC v Reeves, Here, it is fair, just and reasonable for Emily to be liable it was due to her regigence that Najeeb was injured. Thus, Emily three part test set out in Caparov Dickman She may be liable for the injury to Najeeb

Examiner comments

This scored 11 marks – The candidate has displayed an accurate and thorough understanding of the three tests with a large amount of case law. The answer lacks some discussion of the evidence to gain full marks.

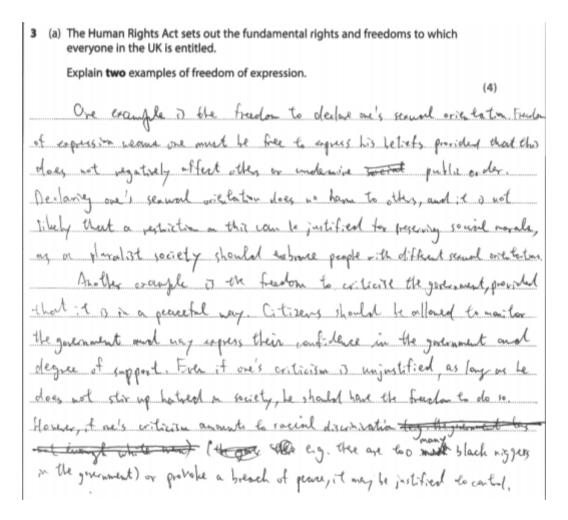

Examiner tip

For an evaluate question 1 or 2 cases well chosen, explained and applied to the scenario will help get the balance right between displaying a thorough understanding of legal theory and the need to show analysis and evaluation skills in its application to the scenario.

Question 3a

The command word is 'explain' which requires candidates to show understanding of the law through an explanation with application or relevant case law.

This question is a points based one where the candidate needs explain 2 examples of freedoms of expression for 2 knowledge marks. For the application marks the candidate then needs to give an expansion of the freedom of expression they have identified, which can use a case. Many candidates scored well on this question with excellent examples and expansion. A small number of candidates discussed limitations of this human right which could not be credited due to the specific nature of the question.

Examiner comments

This scored 4 marks – The candidate takes a slightly different approach with their initial example, freedom of sexual orientation, which was acceptable but gives a lot of detailed expansion on both examples.

Examiner tip

For an explain question the marks to be awarded give a good indication of the length of the answer. Answers should be no more than 2-3 points on each explanation to avoid running out of time towards the end of the paper. This was marked using a levels of response based mark scheme. The candidates' answers were assessed in their entirety and allocated a level based on where this best fitted the level descriptions.

The command word in this question was 'Analyse', which was looking for a detailed answer, identifying the key issues regarding a claim for defamation under the Defamation Act 2013. There was no need for candidates to provide a conclusion.

Candidates generally applied the law well to this scenario with some excellent answers using legislation and case law. Students could enhance their answer by discussing Sophie's damages, which a number did.

For a level 1 candidate response a basic knowledge of defamation such as what was the definition was sufficient to gain credit.

For a level 2 response (3 or 4 marks) this basic knowledge on Defamation would be developed with identification that this was a case of libel, distinct from slander or a reasoned general discussion as to why the newspaper has committed defamation. Implied in candidates' answers were knowledge and understanding of legislative provision and the general rules.

For level 3 responses candidates gave relevant case law and legislative provision such as the need to prove serious harm and damage Sophie's reputation. They then discussed the evidence of this. Gaining the 6th mark was elusive to many students as they adopted a 'scatter gun' approach to discussing the situation, instead of discussing only relevant case law and legislative provision.

Defemation is a tort to protect elgiments from damage to preputation The law found under defermation is Defermation Act 2018. In Stm V Stretch , Lord Atkins stated that the defending statement should lower the individual's reputation and course grief, ridicule and enger. SICD BA sors steles that only sevious horn to report then can be claimed under the Act and, not stelement of abuse (Burkoff v Quichill) and not joiest or jokes (Donoghue v Hayes). Here he news Daily Newspaper has could serious horn to Sophie C as the has lost a large recording contract. In Tolley v Jis Fry the defendent published a conjective of the ordinant and this court coursed a serious horm to his the closments, reputation error he was an ammodeur and this would have courted people to think ho was taking money. In Follow In Hutton v. Tones an article was published about a hickonal Character called Attimus Jover and the ciainent was a bomister darked that individualy would think that it was him and would have comed a serous harm to his reputation, Here State case of J.S fry and Jones can be applied to Cophie C's scenario and thour this will could a serious harm to her neputetran.

Examiner comments

This scored 6 marks – The candidate gets straight to analysis of the scenario showing excellent use of legislation and drawing a correct comparison between relevant case law and Sophie's claim, concluding that she will be successful.

Examiner tip

Avoid the temptation of writing everything you know about a topic, it wastes time. A candidate that can write about only relevant issues will save time, have a much clearer answer and is likely to gain more marks

Remember -the approach that should be taken with appropriate cases is to use them to compare the facts or law of the case with that of the given scenario. Law is a subject of comparison, when it

Question 3c

This was marked using a levels of response based mark scheme. The candidates' answers were assessed in their entirety and allocated a level based on where this best fitted the level descriptions.

The command word in this question was 'Assess', which was looking for an extended answer, looking at a specific area of law. Candidates needed to weigh up factors and events and identify the most important or relevant issues. There was no need for a conclusion though students often attempted to make one.

A key phrase in the question was 'rights and remedies' which many candidates took notice of. Gaining the maximum marks needed to cover both issues but a high level 4 response could be achieved by just considering the rights, which was an approach taken by many candidates. There were some excellent answers applying all the relevant legislation and case law for Occupiers Liability. Weaker candidates made little use of cases with the law implied from their answer. Some answers were generic and scored low marks.

For level 1 candidates were able to give basic knowledge of the law on Occupiers liability.

For level 2 candidates were able give a general assessment of the evidence and often identified Donald as the occupier and Sita as a lawful visitor. Answers were generic and with limited discussion of the key issues.

For level 3 candidates were able to relate in detail one or more of the key issues in the Occupiers Liability Act 1957 such as lawful visitor and/or the need for Donald to discharge his duty to them. Case law was used with some legislative provision but answers often failed to assess the evidence by way of discussion, with assertions that Donald was liable.

For level 4 candidates were able to assess whether or not Donald had taken appropriate steps to discharge his duty to Sita using relevant case law and legislation. For example, excellent answers weighed up whether or not Donald would actually know about the ledges being rotten and what might be a reasonable warning. Remedies were discussed with some excellent conclusions.

This is an offence arising under the Occupier's Liability Act 25 1957 in relation to liability owing to lawful visitors. Under the Act occupier's are those who sufficient central possession of the property. This is morely Stated in Saca). Visitors under the Act are these coho have permission to be on the premises by an Occupier. They are classed under SIC3) as including all invitees. HERRERS These entering under a contractual agreement and those entering under as legal right. According to the Scenarie Denald is an occupier a contractual licensee. Sita is on Waren invited upon land to the makerial interest of the occupier. The Standard of care owed to a visiter is that of under the tort of negligence. Therefore, an occupier may only be expected to safeguard against the teasonably foresecable. If the visiter see they maynot be Covered under the Act. Esdale v Dover distric Council the eruncil agas liable as they did not repair the particopy Further the duty award to independent trades man is judged less harshly. This is because the courts convid Hake a view that tradesman must take safeguards against risks ordinarily incident to the trade (Roles) fitte However, occupiers maybe liable for harm Sustained by an a tradesman that owns not ordinary to the activity. In Salmen v Sea Farery econors of a chip shop owner were liable for injury sustained by a fireman duting to the nature of fire Applying to the Scenario, Donald is liable for injuries caused to site as it is reasonably

This scored 9 marks – An excellent answer if a little too lengthy. Covers all the issues in details with excellent use of case law and legislation and a very comprehensive theoretical discussion of damages. The candidate could have reduced this element down somewhat and does not gain 10 marks as they could have been specific with some elements of the damages that could be awarded to Sita.

Examiner tip

Be as concise as possible and make sure you have addressed every element the question to gain full marks.

The command word is 'identify' which requires candidates give brief explanations and/or examples of the focus of the question. There is no requirement or expectation to write a lot about a topic. With this question candidates needed to identify what the specific consideration was between the two parties. There was no need to show any knowledge consideration, in terms of case law or definitions.

This question is a points based one where the candidate needs to provide examples of consideration in the contractual relationship between the two parties, four different elements of consideration for 4 marks, such as the advance paid of £4,000 paid to Robbie. A significant number of students did not understand the question and spent some considerable discussing what consideration was together with case law. Though it was pleasing to see students detailed knowledge of the topic as the question was purely about applying this to the scenario no credit could be awarded for this part of an answer. However, many candidates scored well on this question with the correct identification of at least 2 and often 3 areas of consideration between Robbie and Joanna. A small number of candidates failed to recognise that it was only the contract between Robbie and Joanna that creditable, and gave details of consideration for Martin. The element of consideration candidates often failed to spot was the remaining £6,000 payment to Robbie after completion of the contract or the fact that Robbie's promised services were consideration.

(a) Identify the consideration that exists in the contract between Robbie and Joanna.

The consideration is where a party exchanges promises. There are a few elements on consideration, among of them are consideration need not be sufficient but must be an adequate, consideration must not be the part, a contributed duty can not be a consideration, and a legal array is not a consideration. The exchange of promises between Robbie and Joanna took part when Robbie had agreed to partom of her night club for £1000 and £4000 would be paid in advance and Joanna attack agreed to spend £1000 on equipment for the performances, and also hire extre stads for £900.

Examiner comments

This scored 3 marks – identifies the promise by Robbie to perform, £1,000 not accepted as £10,000, £4,000 advance and the £1,000 for equipment.

No credit was awarded for the explanation of consideration.

Examiner tip

Read and understand what the question is asking you to do, it can save time and gain marks.

Remember- if quoting figures or details from the scenario make sure they are accurate.

Question 4b

This was marked using a levels of response based mark scheme. The candidates' answers were assessed in their entirety and allocated a level based on where this best fitted the level descriptions.

The command word in this question was 'Analyse', which was looking for a detailed answer, identifying the key issues regarding whether or not Joanna could terminate her contract with Robbie. There was no need for candidates to provide a conclusion.

Candidates generally understood that there was an ability to terminate the contract, though some used little case law and relied on implied understanding from their answer to score marks.

For a level 1 candidate response a basic knowledge of termination of contract such as the fact it could not be performed due to the fire could gain credit.

For a level 2 response (3 or 4 marks) this basic knowledge on frustration would be developed with identification of the issues, though this was often without relevant case law.

For level 3 responses candidates gave relevant case law briefly discussing the effect of frustration. Better candidates were able to show the similarities between the case of Taylor v Caldwell and Joanna's situation, stating the effect of termination on the parties.

A contract 16 fruestrated conen an unforgecable Circumstance arises Conich renders the performance Of the Contract cinforceable. In Taylor V Chalchoell The C hired a holl from 3 to hola a series of concerts, but the before the concerts could take place the hall was destroyed by a fire. Here the Contract coas frustrated as the hall was important to the contract. Similarly Toanna coll be able to terminate her contract coith Robbie, me I due to The fire conich caused extensive clamage to me building, resulting in the building being unsafe for performance. Neither party can que for breach of contract. The down Reform (Frustrated Contracts) Act 1983 provides more expenses ore recoverable and money paid before the frustrating event is recoverable Mus Joanno will be able to recover The floor spent on equipment and floor on shaft and Pobbie the $4000 advance paid to Joanna.

Examiner comments

This scored 6 marks – defines frustration, relates Joanna's situation to Taylor v Caldwell and briefly discusses the effect on the parties.

Examiner tip

Comparing a scenario to relevant case law in terms of facts/and or law is a great way to weigh up the evidence and come to an informed conclusion.

Question 4c

This was marked using a levels of response based mark scheme. The candidates' answers were assessed in their entirety and allocated a level based on where this best fitted the level descriptions.

The command word in this question was 'Assess', which was looking for an extended answer, looking at a specific area of law. Candidates needed to weigh up factors and events and identify the most important or relevant issues. There was no need for a conclusion though students often attempted to make one.

A key phrase in the question was 'rights and remedies' which many candidates took notice of. Gaining the maximum marks needed to cover both issues but a high level 4 response could be achieved by just considering the rights, which was an approach taken by many candidates. There were a number of generic answers were which scored low marks. Many students correctly assessed the Sales of Goods and services Act issues but only the better answers were able to consider the breach of contract issues.

For level 1 candidates were able to give basic knowledge of the breach of contract or the Sale of Goods and Services Act.

For level 2 candidates were able give a general assessment of the evidence and often identified either a breach of contract or Martin's breach of his duty under the Sale of Goods and Services Act. Answers were generic and with limited discussion of the key issues.

For level 3 candidates were able to relate in detail to the Sale of Goods and Services Act though often quoted sections which were of little relevance to the scenario. Answers were unbalanced but had some good analysis of the situation.

For level 4 candidates were able to assess whether Martin had broken his contractual duty both under the Sale of Goods and Services Act and contract law principals using relevant case law and legislation. Remedies were discussed with some excellent conclusions, including the issue of what was foreseeable at the time the contract was created under the rules in Hadley v Baxendale.

This scored 10 marks – Excellent doing much more than expected. Covers Sale of Goods and Services, breach of Contract and damages.

Examiner tip

Try and identify the key issues, cases and legislation in a scenario to avoid discussing issues that fail to enhance your mark. You will find your answers are more concise and focused.

Ouestion 5

This was marked using some levels of response based mark scheme. The candidates' answers were assessed in their entirety and allocated a level based on where this best fitted the level descriptions. This is the question candidates need to spend some time on due to the level of marks available. The command word in this question was 'Evaluate', which was looking for an extended answer, identifying areas of law which were given and some which were not. Candidates needed to draw a conclusion based on the law, its application and evaluation, with use of the problem.

Candidates needed to firstly consider the chances, 'likelihood', of Maria being found guilty of both Basic and Aggravated Criminal Damage. Candidates then needed to consider whether Maria would be able to successfully argue the defence of duress.

For level 1 candidates were able to give basic knowledge on the law of either Basic or Aggravated Criminal Damage and/or the defence of Duress. Candidates who attempted to apply the law of negligence were limited to this level, as the question was answered incorrectly.

For level 2 candidates were able to relate the law of either Basic criminal damage, Aggravated criminal damage or duress to Maria. There was little evidence of relevant legislation or case law applied to the scenario. Candidates answers tended to be generic and unfinished.

For level 3 candidates were able to relate the law on basic or aggravated criminal damage or duress to the scenario with some relevant case law or legislation. At the bottom of this level Candidates had only evaluated one or perhaps two elements of the question with some attempt at a judgment. At the top of this level all three elements were attempted with case law and legislation though there were some omissions or errors.

For level 4 candidates were able to discuss why Maria was liable for both basic and aggravated criminal damage using relevant case law and legislation. Some answers were proficient in two of the three areas of criminal law. Higher level 4 answers covered all three aspects with appropriate discussion of case law and legislation, with a reasoned judgment as to Maria's criminal liability.

Evaluate the likelihood of Maria being convicted of a criminal damage offence and her being able to successfully use the defence of duress.

This guestion concerns the Orea of Criminal Domage under & the Criminal Damage Act 1971. Dana can be found quirty of Criminal damage orner one looses the bolls on one of Graces Car Causing her to loose control of the car and crash me Car. G. The four main september available are discharge, fine, community gantence and imprisonment. Given the fact mot Maria 15 Only 16 years Old The courts may give her a discharge or may even impose a community gentence to requiring her to undergo tehabilitation programmes.

Examiner comments

This scored 18 marks – An excellent answer. However, the candidate could have perhaps been more selective with their content. For example, stating the sentence details is worth little credit. Property and belonging to another are not contentious in this scenario so gain little credit 20 marks was not achieved as duress lacks some key content such as the case of R v Bowen, which gives the rules regarding the type of personal characteristics that can and cannot be considered when considering what the reasonable man might do in the same situation.

Examiner tip

Try and just focus on the most contentious issues in a question and only briefly discuss issues such as basic definitions and areas of an offence/defence that is non-contentious.

Paper Summary

Based on their performance on this paper, candidates are offered the following advice:

- Read the questions and pay careful attention to what the command words are asking you to do. This will mean answers will be more focused on what gains marks.
- Use relevant case law and legislation for the areas of the problem that are felt to be contentious and try to only briefly discuss areas that are non-contentious.
- Use cases as a way of comparing the facts or law in the case to the evidence in the scenario. This will provoke discussion as to how similar and therefore how likely the question meets the legal requirements or not.
- Use legal concepts rather than generic 'common sense' answers.
