General Marking Guidance

- All candidates must receive the same treatment. Examiners must mark the first candidate in exactly the same way as they mark the last.
- Mark schemes should be applied positively. Candidates must be rewarded for what they have shown they can do rather than penalised for omissions.
- Examiners should mark according to the mark scheme not according to their perception of where the grade boundaries may lie.
- There is no ceiling on achievement. All marks on the mark scheme should be used appropriately.
- All the marks on the mark scheme are designed to be awarded. Examiners should always award full marks if deserved, i.e. if the answer matches the mark scheme. Examiners should also be prepared to award zero marks if the candidate's response is not worthy of credit according to the mark scheme.
- Where some judgement is required, mark schemes will provide the principles by which marks will be awarded and exemplification may be limited.
- When examiners are in doubt regarding the application of the mark scheme to a candidate's response, the team leader must be consulted.
- Crossed out work should be marked UNLESS the candidate has replaced it with an alternative response.

Paper 1

Section A

A02

- (i) read and understand texts with insight and engagement
- (ii) develop and sustain interpretations of writers' ideas and perspectives
- (iii) understand and make some evaluation of how writers use linguistic and structural devices to achieve their effects

Question number	Answer	Mark
1	Examiners should reward only the answer: Medford	1

Question number	Answer	Mark
2	Examiners should reward all valid responses to the passage, one mark per point up to a maximum of three marks: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• (the edge of the town is) slummy• chaotic• litter• mobs• (it began) abruptly• dubious-looking clinics• (The town was ...) meaner-looking Do not accept 'larger' or 'fuller'.	3

Question number	Answer	Mark
3	Examiners should reward all valid responses to the passage, one mark per point up to a maximum of four marks: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• He compares the school buildings now to what it was like then to develop his own feelings of abandonment and loss• He compares his house to what it had been like in order to develop feelings of being overwhelmed by his experience and profound disappointment• A comparative link is made between the weather and his feelings of sadness• The Roseveares, the school founders, are compared to ghosts to develop feelings of futility• The weeds are used to represent the decline of the school and to develop ideas of decay	4

Question number	Indicative content	Mark
4	Examiners should refer to the following bullet points and then to the table to reach an overall judgement. There are many features in the passage that are worthy of comment. Examiners must reward all valid points that show an engagement with the text and an appreciation of the writer's technique rather than have a set agenda of items that they are looking for. Examiners must reward all valid points that address the question and show a clear grasp of the writer's technique. Candidates may refer to some of the following points: The difference between what he expects and the reality he finds: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • the revelation that the writer had spent "years" thinking of his return builds anticipation • the second sentence builds high expectations in the reader in its description of "delicious anticipation" • use of the phrase "homecoming more important" indicates the emotional investment of the writer • the word "abruptly" signals the shift in atmosphere • the squalid conditions of Limbe prefigure the writer's experience at the school • the atmosphere of impending doom is momentarily lifted by the hope inspired by the good quality road to Soche • a wide range of emotive vocabulary creates an atmosphere of dereliction and neglect: "semi-derelict"; "battered buildings"; "poorly maintained" • the only people he meets do nothing constructive, but just stand around "gaping" • the well-tended garden is now "scrappy" • instead of the orderly garden the wilderness represented by elephant grass has almost overwhelmed everything and there is a hostile suggestion that it will soon take over the house as it is now "pressed" against the walls • the firewood is further evidence of a lack of order as it is "thrown" against the wall, emphasised by the phrase "higgledy-piggledy" • the classrooms, where one expects a greater sense of order, are worse than the other buildings • he expects to return to a place where he had volunteered, demonstrating his generosity of spirit, but returns to find that "nobody cares" creates an atmosphere of dejection the description of the weather: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • the writer sets off in a "fine, chilly and drifting mist," which begins to develop a cold and unwelcoming atmosphere 	12

- the weather is seen as being responsible for some of the damage, "rain-stained mildewed walls and sagging roofs", directly adding to the atmosphere of neglect
- the repetition of "mildewed" refers to the persistence of damp weather and develops the atmosphere of decay and neglect
- the wet weather is responsible for creating "green slime" which adds to the sense of the place being taken over by nature as the walls themselves succumb to the slime
- the weather is directly connected to the creation of an overwhelming mood of "melancholy" and regret
- the writer's use of pathetic fallacy

particular words, phrases and techniques:

- the structure of the passage takes the reader steadily downhill from obsessive and delicious anticipation of the start to the overwhelming disillusion leading to the commitment in the final sentence that he will not be back
- some short sentences for effect making deliberate use of simple, basic vocabulary, "But I was wrong", "No one cares."
- use of rhetorical questions, "But how much does a broom cost?"
- use of emotive language, "sacrifice"
- extended metaphor of spectres and haunting to emphasise how insubstantial their legacy is
- metaphor of education as one of planting seeds, which have since died
- extensive use of compound sentences that pile up images of decay and dereliction for emphasis

- (iii) understand and make some evaluation of how writers use linguistic and structural devices to achieve their effects

Question number	Indicative content	Mark
5	Examiners should refer to the following bullet points and then to the table to come to an overall judgement. There are many aspects to this leaflet which candidates may choose to emphasise and examiners must reward all valid points that show engagement and insight. Candidates may refer to some of the following points: Throughout the whole text <ul style="list-style-type: none">• use of strongly contrasting colour throughout for emphasis• the colour blue represents water throughout; yellow represents the sun and sand and red is used as a colour of warning and alarm• the pages are linked by the wave motif that forms part of the background image or colour of each section. This also represents the dangerous element of the sea that the RNLi helps to protect the public from• relative size of images – the largest images on top are those of happy families and as such are a direct appeal to the target audience. The largest image used as a background is that of the RNLi boat and lifeguard, thus linking the public and the RNLi through the relative image size• the order in which the texts appear illustrates the good work that the RNLi performs, before the final section appeals for money as a deliberate structuring intended to garner the most support• repetition throughout of the words “Lifeguard” and “RNLi” in text and in image for emphasis On the Beach <ul style="list-style-type: none">• use of images – the boy and girl playing in the surf appeal to a family audience and represent safe play in the sea, the jet ski in the background broadens the appeal• use of repetition - The RNLi logo is repeated and represents a fluttering flag, patriotically, red, white and blue• use of emotive language, “fun” True story <ul style="list-style-type: none">• the mother and son image broadens the family appeal• the text here is notably different as a narrative text, written in the first person	10

- text layout – the one line paragraph creates tension and suspense for the reader
- use of emotive language throughout – “makes me cry”; “mum”; “terrifying”; “shock”; “eternally grateful”
- final paragraph contains the lesson learnt, “I’ll certainly always go to a lifeguard patrolled beach in future.” The reader connects with the first person narrative and through this also connects with the moral of the tale
- rips – makes use of layout features of bold subheadings and bullet points to highlight key messages; also makes use of cartoon style imagery for instruction. The image style is intended to appeal to a younger audience

Know your flags

- background colour is yellow which may represent the sun and sand associated with watersports
- background image is of the lifeguard flag and of surfboarders entering the water, thereby connecting the potential person needing help with the agency that provides it
- use of shape – the triangle device is familiar as a road sign that indicates warning
- the exclamation mark is used on signs to indicate an unknown hazard
- use of second person to instruct the reader, “Know your flags”
- use of bold text for emphasis, “ Never go in the water ...”
- deliberately short, often ungrammatical structure to emphasise directness

Swimming, Surfing and Bodyboarding

- background colour is a darker yellow, and the image is of a surfboarder leaving the water and walking in the opposite direction to the left hand page. This represents the bright sunrise and beginning activity on the left and the coming sunset and safe departure from the water on the right
- use of the second person for directness throughout
- very positive about watersports in order to bond with the reader and avoid the appearance of seeming to only see the negative aspects of the activities, which could undermine the effectiveness of the advice given, “Swimming is one of the best all round activities”; “Surfing and bodyboarding are the most fantastic fun”
- use of a polite tone, “We suggest”
- layout features use of bold subheadings and bullet points to highlight key messages

The RNLI

- use of colour – blue represents water on the page that explains what the RNLI does
- red is used as a warning colour throughout the leaflet
- use of text colour and style for emphasis such as in the “Beaches Need Lifeguards” section which focuses the reader on the word “Life” which emphasises the intended outcome of the work of the RNLI <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • the text makes use of statistics to explain the work of the RNLI and presents them as busy and successful in saving lives • scale of need is represented by the RNLI doubling its coverage • use of emotive language to appeal for support – “lifesavers”; “vital”; “charity” • the scale of emotive language increases in the red segment - “when someone is drowning in the surf”; “a child swept out to sea”. This is where the text appeals for money and support and provides contact details • direct connection with the audience – the family audience through the text and surfers through the image which depicts a teenage/young adult surfer being rescued • use of direct appeal – “will you help us meet that need?”
