Introduction

Centres are thanked for choosing Pearson Edexcel as their International GCSE English Literature provider. We very much hope that both our candidates and centres are delighted with their results.

Introduction

The Summer 2022 series was very successful and the 4ET1 01 paper performed well and was very similar in performance to previous series. There were no errors in the paper, no erratum notices and there were no enquiries from centres following the examination.

Centres are once again congratulated on preparing their candidates so well, especially during another very challenging year. As always, the responses are a pleasure to mark and are an enjoyable read.

For the Summer 2022 paper, it was decided to remove the Anthology Poetry section due to the unprecedented circumstances related to the pandemic. The removal of one section of the paper enabled candidates and centres to access the paper with more confidence, especially after lost teaching and learning hours.

For this series, there were just two sections. In Section A, candidates were presented with an unseen poem and answered a question based on it (20 marks). For Section B, Modern Prose, candidates responded to one of two questions based on the prose text that they had studied (40 marks). The total mark for this paper was 60.

Performance overall seems similar to previous series. There was the same order in popularity of the Prose texts, with Of Mice and Men remaining the most popular followed by To Kill a Mockingbird. The least popular text remains The Joy Luck Club, but those who attempt it are often very successful.

A full range of marks were awarded. Often, as seen in the past, responses to Questions 6-11 were very successful and gained marks in the top two levels.

There were several 2in1 responses and exception scripts, where candidates had not written their Prose response in the correct answer space. Centres are urged to remind their students that there are specific areas in the answer booklet where responses should be written.

Feedback from examiners has been positive throughout and they were very impressed with most of the responses seen.

One examiner helpfully summarised the strengths and weakness in responses.

Students that did well in the Unseen Poetry section :

- thought about the deeper meaning of the poem
- explored language form and structure skilfully
- analysed language form and structure together, rather than in separate paragraphs.

For the Prose section,

The candidates that did well:

- used short embedded quotations
- had a good knowledge of the context and how it impacted the text
- weaved the context into the essay, rather than bulking it on at the end
- answered the question clearly.

Candidates that did less well:

- had less knowledge of the text
- used long quotations or provided narrative responses
- bulked on too much context at the beginning or at the end of paragraphs.

Interestingly, the points above are similar to those mentioned in previous centre reports, which supports the belief that overall, the performance of the paper was very similar to past series.

With the optional prose questions, there was mostly a balance in the number of responses received. The paper performed as intended and provided equal opportunities for all candidates.

Question 1

Section A Unseen Poem

Q1. Power Failure by Andrew Forster

Question: Explore how the writer presents the experience of a power failure in this poem.

Andrew Foster's poem was well-received and there were many good answers. Most responses gained marks in Level 3 and above.

Many candidates identified a range of poetic features and considered the poem's 'effect on the reader'. Most candidates could say something about the storm and most picked out the noise and supported this with a relevant example. Better answers identified onomatopoeia and personification and gave an explanation such as 'shows how scary the storm is'. Better responses gave multiple examples. The best noticed the tonal shift. Other points include:

- some used the title as a way in which this worked well the contrast with power suggesting force and failure as the opposite
- some explored the use of 'severed' to explore the force of the power failure
- some discussed 'flicker' and identified it as sinister because of shadows
- the word 'scrabble' was explored when discussing the haste of actions; however, one did identify it as the game they could no longer play
- animal imagery, such as 'prowl', provided various interpretations, such as being out of control, reverting back to basic instincts, snatching in desperation and behaving like a terrified pet
- the contrast from darkness to light at the end of the poem was another area discussed. Even better, those who discussed the change of tone (and many did) and the use of contrasting colours were mostly successful.
- many commented on the relationship and seeing something new in a partner
- some saw the lesson that out of an ordeal good can come
- the majority of structure points were focused on enjambement and the use of italics. Explanations varied though the vast majority were along the lines of 'shows how his mind was all over the place' or 'to emphasise the time'.

Other Examiner comments include:

'Few simply 'feature-spotted' and seemed aware of what would be required in connecting their observations to matters within the poem.'

'On the whole, very high-quality responses, with multiple full mark answers and rarely falling below Level 2.'

'Candidates regularly picked out key aspects such as onomatopoeia, personification and alliteration. Language and imagery were very well covered. The analysis of form and structure was less secure, with many candidates correctly recognising structural features but not necessarily taking these features back to the question. A lot seemed to run out of time on this Q.'

One examiner commented: 'This was a very engaging poem and students were able to access this at all levels. Student engagement was high, and it was unusual to see any students who hadn't given this question a really good go. There were a great range of features to pick out and students appeared to enjoy looking at the tone and mood of the poem as well as the language and structural elements. The question was very clear, and I did not see any misunderstanding of this.'

Other comments received include:

'A great poem with plenty to offer. Imagery, sound devices and structure all very open to analysis. Unfortunately, there were some misinterpretations suggesting that the essential initial couple of careful readings were not occurring. Some interpretations were different, including one who thought the whole thing was set in heaven, another had the character on a life support machine. There were a few misunderstandings of the second person in the poem, but also many who seemed incapable of escaping the narrative approach: 'This is what is happening' instead of looking for ways in which the writer presents what is happening. I've also noticed an increase in the number of candidates using rather ornate, Greek literary terms without a clue what they mean or how they help. Even worse was the misapplication of the more frequent terminology. Anything can be a metaphor nowadays when it really isn't!'

'What a fantastic choice of poem – something for everyone. Some stunning responses. 'Semantic fields' seem somewhat overused and misunderstood. There was also a tendency to always assume that "you" must always and only ever be exclusively 'the reader' which skewed some responses, I felt. Some candidates did not always leave enough time to address the second half of the poem, which – as is so often the case – was limiting this time. A fair number grasped the overview but failed to tackle the detail.'

'Unseen poetry was good. Lots of candidates understood the poem well and used subject terminology to support their ideas. Lots of candidates addressed the poem from a metaphorical standpoint.'

The poem and question performed well and as intended and the quality of responses was similar to past series, with a full range of marks awarded.

The poem and question was similar in complexity, style and performance as past unseen poetry questions.

There are five exemplars for this question, as all candidates must answer Question 1.

power Luilve Andrew forster successed in writing his & experience of his fumous poem " power Sailve" The poen Stute by that the Storm has been been broken and in Emergency. "Emergency lines are busy" as they were trying to sources to light hip because flere were in darkness. All in all Andrew forster Succeed in presenting the the poen in a Aice way that graps the reals the e.)

This is a short response that demonstrates some understanding of the poem and makes some comment on the use of language and structure, such as figurative and simple language, pronouns and colons. There is some generalised comment in relation to structure. The candidate considers how the speaker hunts for candles, but a lack of coverage hinders progress. More coverage and close analysis would have benefited this response.

Level 2, 6 marks

Our second exemplar is a borderline response.

In the poem the writer, andrew Forster presents the experience of a power future to be extremely frightening. This is evidenced by the quete "Unight serections". This use of descriptive language paints a very graphic add distarbing picture for the reader. Furthemore, the curutchiend of " night screams" suggest something cut of a horror more, again reducting on sust how grightening the writer presents the proner surge to be. Additionally the quite " he are in darkness" also demonstrates how the writer presents the expension re of a proment turge to be grightening. This is becaused, He choice language used - Oderkress', links to many people and childrens hast phonics, me - being cryceld the dark. This could therefore allop to inter Therefore, surguesting the frightening experie that it have breve created for the people in the power singe quiline.

Secondly, the writer presents the experience of a poher guilure to be Rharlic, this is demonstrated his use of from and structure the used through rout the poem, in order to runny the hereds of throughout. O e example Hus ensu LS Vecr Me e ant rekt . 0k er Im run. se rent KELTING CO 65.7  $\alpha$ d rkne

In this response, the candidate identifies the frightening and chaotic experience at the beginning of the poem, but the lack of coverage and examples hinders progress. There are structural points, including repetition and enjambement, but there is a lack of specific examples. Overall, there is a clear understanding of the poem. This is a borderline Level 2 and 3 response, but it was decided to slip this just in to Level 3.

Level 3, 9 marks

Candidates are free to select and comment on textual details in a variety of ways. All interpretations are considered, and awarded for, if supported by relevant evidence.

Our third example is a Level 3 response working towards the next level.

Turrighout the poem, * power failure the story of a couple whom loose power in their house in presented to the reader as something that can learn from, departe the unexpected event

For elample, the enlipected noticeve of the event is demonstrated by the fact that the stom had "severed" an electrical capple. This wortent chore of the language enances the idea that perhaps it was something hand to avoid and something that possibly maked the reader yell ancious and concerned by the thought of doukness.

Furthemore, the unter's chorce of enjoinbinent at the end of each stay Za heughts the sense of suprize of the power cut and the distraction that it is.

for example, in the third stanza, the speaker states that "echoes of distant wasnes, shatters . [enjakment] my concentration". This preak in the flow of the poen not only shows the reality of a pomer failure, but also the demonstrates rearly that it did in part " shatter " the spoolpers incentration

Throughout the poem, the edea of new experiences is also reflected. Despite the longility of the event, demonstrated through the repetative ungth and structure of the stanzas, the speaker learns more about the person whom they are stuck with for example when in total darkness-only ut by coundle light, the speaker recognizes jeartures that "I Espeaker] hadn't seen before". This new acklowedgment of a new relifection about someone & perhaps reflects the concept that you do not have to see someone pace-to-face to better stand the character that

The candidate provides a clear introduction, suggesting an overall understanding of the poem. An understanding of a range of language form and structure is demonstrated, and clearly relevant examples support the response. There are comments about the references to darkness and light and how, in such experiences, new things are learned about a person. Close analysis is not sustained, but this is working towards Level 4.

Level 3, 12 marks

Candidates should comment on language, structure and form (AO2). Ideally, candidates should select specific words and phrases, identify techniques, and explain how these are used to achieve an effect on the reader. The following is an example of a response just slipping into Level 4.

The poem "Power falline" by Andrew forstern represents has new experiences can change the very are look at someone. In the opening strunza, we are presented with the power failure The use of Enjampment of "and we are in dorkness suggest how the weather is consuming changing and now inconsistant and strong each blow of vind is. Also, Forster destres "the "night screens" giving a sense of agitudian the the reader. Thous Enghe employed with the italics of this will fast some time to emphisise the pesonification of the night. This agitation & comes onto the next Stanza, where they "scrabble in the copboards". Uhen the post attempts to relax himself, the "words flicke in and and ob Shadows which readers a tone of agibation and worry. The use of personification of the reather is between further expressed as the "wind delivering echoes" huter places the meather in the forefront of the reader's nind. In the middle of the poen worny forsace is experiencing, the use of strong verbs such as "proval" and "smarth Snation" give a real

Sanse of the worry and fear the poort is going through The use of enjambment is further used to break the semanois field of worry and distress." Shifting blackness to Check the car is the shift the new of orjambment is cacabes worry as it puts the reader int on a cliffmanger as for as I split second we do not know if the car mus been taken by the Storm. He other charam is the presented. How this first actions is getting be glass of water " this juk poposes the pool experiment so far as he has so constantly been in disparir and the other charober is getting something as simple as having some water. A the end of theirs shonea, I forchar realises something new.

In the ending two obanzas, the post finds a new perspective from the flickering of the lights, maily from the other charaber. you the other charabar nos "a new angle" to my jow and porstor can new see the red in the brown of your hair this contracts all prior stanzas as it is a deep description of the other charabur when the prior Stanzas have been filled with disness and adverding. In the final stanza the poet describes has "he faces " new depanis" and "new facelers" pris alludes to per meaning the other chercher on how with each new experiment the learn more about it there ever.

In conclusion, "Power falivre" by Andres Forster represents how twee is always Soreting deeper to a person or a thing ton you mynt realized even you thin

In this response, the candidate identifies how new experiences occur during the power failure. The response is focused and detailed and the candidate is beginning to offer some thoughtful comments. There is some exploration about the sense of agitation and worry, how the speaker worries about his car, and learning new things about people. There is identification of the use of enjambement, personification, strong verbs and contrasts. Further coverage and examples could have been included.

Level 4, 14 marks

Some candidates find the acronym PETER (Point, Evidence, Technique, Effect on Reader) particularly useful, as it addresses all bullets in the mark scheme.

This final exemplar is a full mark response.

Le uniter mesents tre experience d'a parer Cailure in many different way and Forster uses language and structure to convey the to the Veader his experience I the power failure the form is a lyric and it is about a powerfailure however Porster intertuines a hidden meaning into the form of has peoples perspectives of other people change. The first may the writer presents his experiences of the power failure to the reader is through the use of language and imagery. On the opening line of the first stanza Forster says and we are indarkness." The word "we" implies that Porster was not alove during this forcer failure and the watter and "dorkness" in this that they have no light in the house what Forster opens the of poem with this language because Forster is setting the scene for the reader and allows the reader to understand what is going on On the Second Wine of the first Stanza Forster says "Emergence Cines are busy and the night screams This will best some time "The phrase "the right Screams This will last some time " implies that the power ison is not going to be coming back on ony time soon and so they shall make do with What they have got for the time being. The phrase "This whe last some time" is in italics and this Jurther emphasises to the reader that they are going to be in the dark for a while. Le uniter also uses structure to convey to the reader their experiences of the pore tailure. The lyric is eight stanzas long however it's not until the last four stanzas where Forster styps talking specifically about the power cut but instead about the hidden meaning of the poem which is how people change. In the Final line of Stanza four Forster says "peer into shifting blackness to check the car is still there. The uniter thas Used explantment to flow the sensence onto the next stanza because the phrase" is still there " is In the fifth stanza where as the rest of the quotation is in the fourth stanza. The writer uses enjourbanent not only to bla the line into the next stanza but also to hide the sudden change of perspective. On line 13 Forster says " How smile at my agitation The of quotation is significant because it is the first time Forster directly mentions the second person in fre noom as before Forster only used the monouns I or we. The sudden change in perspective intrigues. The reader because they are non interested as to why Porster has mentioned the second person more promenanty. By doing this, Forster is able to convey there his Experiences much to the reader much cosier as he uses a different view of what is going on

The unter also uses the ending to convey his expertences to the reader about the pamer faiture. Le phal three Stanzas are all different to the opening three stanzas because the first three stanzas talk about the problems that Forster and his con componen are focing themselves due to the power failure where as the final type stanzas focus more on what the parser bailure has renealed. On line 17 Forster Say's "you are revealed agan in fragments with a Wesh perspective." The quotation implies that forster U now Seeing his his companion in a completely different nay and that he now has a "Wesh" perspective" of them. Torster vareals this new and mesh perspective towards the end of the stepsen to highligh that non after all the paricking of the power cut, he has calmed down and opened his eyes and is now open to a new point of when and this around the reader in because they are non wonderstag that why Forster has changed his tone. On like 21 Forster says "These things about you I hoven't seen before" " The reader can more that Porster is referring to the fact that he has this new opinion and tien of this person and the quotation "a nen angle to your jan, golden sheen on you check " coveys to the reader that maybe he has developed feelings for this person in all he choos that has happened with the power failure. This is ironic because non there is less light due to the power failure he can see more of the person. The final line of the poen sons "rise to the light" The quotation portrays that in the absence of physical light, a ven view of this person has -appe anose avose

I'n conclusion, Forsteruses presents his expedences of the power faitures by using magery and Structure as new as the entiry which he uses to convey the hidden meaning of the poen poet although there is a power cut, a new perspective has come to and that non he can see more about this person des pite there being less light and the use of this irong conveys to the neader that Forster has developed beelings for his companion and that the whole poem is about seeing things through a fresh lens.

After a clear introduction that recognises the overall meaning of the poem, the candidate provides a detailed commentary of the poem. This is a confident and maturely expressed response. Specific words and phrases are selected, and a range of points has been made, such as the contrast of light and dark, the changing tone from panic to calm and 'seeing things through a fresh lens'. Techniques identified include: italics, enjambement, pronouns, and irony. The point about the phrase 'rise to the light' is a particularly good point. This is assured and the candidate provides a cohesive evaluation of the poem.

Level 5, 20 marks

Question 2

SECTION B, Anthology poems, was removed for this series due to the current unprecedented circumstances. The Prose section was relabelled as Section B.

SECTION B Modern Prose

To Kill a Mockingbird

Q2: Explore the character of Mrs Dubose in To Kill a Mockingbird

Most identified Mrs Dubose as racist and brave and considered her interaction with Jem and Scout. Most considered her morphine addiction and Jem's breaking of her camelias. There were several thoughtful responses that explored a range of points, and some considered Mrs Dubose as a tool for learning. The vast majority of responses had contextual points, mainly referring to the Jim Crow laws and the Scottsboro Trials, and some referred to the 'Southern Belle' stereotype.

The question performed as expected. With a range of marks awarded most candidates gained marks in Level 3 or above. The character of Mrs Dubose has been used in past papers and performance was similar.

Examiner comments include:

'Candidates portrayed Mrs Dubose as a sympathetic character in the main, although alluding to how scary she had appeared at first to the children. Comparisons were made between her and Boo Radley in this respect demonstrating how first impressions can be deceiving. There were interesting discussions relating to her morphine addiction and her representation as a symbol of courage. There was recognition of Harper Lee using this as a message to America that prejudice can be overcome through the innocence of childhood and perceptions that have not yet become influenced by adult hatred. Some good points were raised examining how Jem learns that bravery isn't about using a gun, but instead is about selflessness.'

'In questions 2&3 these were mostly equal for myself, and both showed some intuitive answers. Candidates were very aware of the character Mrs Dubois and her relevance in the novel and they seemed to relish writing about the lies in the novel.'

Both TKAMB Qs were generally answered to a high standard with candidates able to demonstrate strong knowledge of the text and its contexts. Understanding of Mrs Dubose's importance was generally good with candidates not only able to discuss her actions and character but also how she reflects on other characters and is used to demonstrate several themes whilst almost blending into the background of Maycomb.'

For this question, a Level 4 response is provided.

The character of Mrs Dubose is one that is an old-confederate, a woman and is courageous. Mrs Dubose in an elderly war woman who lives next to the main characters of the novel, the Each family. Throughout the novel she represents different views of in Maycomb and tifest lifestyles of the time. Harper Lee wrote TKAM in the during the civil rights movement but set her hove in the 1930's America. It was a time where social inequality was deeply enrooted into the tabric of the Southern states, which is shown in the novel. As L Lee desp describes this time from one of change, we can understand how bed it tarley was in 1930's America. Mrs Oubose was is a courageous and stong character in to kill a mot mocking bird KATCh). She has a morphine addiction which

'She to rid herself of , but despite her old age and how hard it was to dercome her addiction. This strength of will power and determination depicts how she was strong. She also is strong in holding her beliefs Despite Atticus bringing a new perspective to the town of Maycomb, Mo aubose doe does not move from her opinions at any point in the novel. This strength of character is one that could have been developed and seen in the great depression. A time of great economical poverty after the Wall Street Crash of 1929, brought about very hard times for the people for America and This time experience may have people more resillient to have things, wh is reflected in the stubboness of Mrs Dubose's Choracter Mrs abose is a bonon, representing a different view on the social inequality towards blomen at the in the book. Despite that other women in the book, such as Miss Maudie, fight for Women's rights ... Mo shick in her ways a Pubose is want the role of Women to change. She tells Scoul, the Each daughter, to 'Swap tells those dungarees for a camisole' in a small comment to reflect of on both Scout's femininity and have Mrs Dubase think she should express it. This is a contrashing view to other women both at the time and In the 1950's who wanted more for Women. Even though Women got the vote in the 1920's, there was still much to be done so that Women had equal rights. This work was done right into the 1960's and fed directly into the 19 civil rights movement. Mrs Dubose is a old-confederate, Mrs Dubose holds racist view throughout the novel and Ton Robinsons case, and does not believe in equal rights for all people. She does not hide these views from anyone, including the Finch children as she tells then that Atticus Finch 'is lawing for a conveys how she is discriminatory and does not agree with Atticus's fight for Ton Robinson's justice. She is a confederate Meaning that the supports slavery and is was in support of the confederacy during the civil war in the 1961-65. The death of Mrs Dubose represents the during out of old racist and and discriminatory views. As she dies fighting her morphine addiction , a connection can Ton Robinsons be made between her fight and a just case. Her death is light for , and when many is the book Bob Ewell also dies, the most discriminator characters have ratural justice delivered to then to give cathorsis to the reader an older Arbose is also member of Maycombs society and as she ways older we see that the old gets ara't able to be upheld. With town finch Atticus characters such as and fighting for equality, we begin also Mandie new age of ideas start in See a Maycomb. In conclusion, Mrs Dubose woman, an old - confiderate and a courageous death brings about a new time in Maycomb tespite the sad nature of her death.

This is a sustained and personal response. The candidate demonstrates a thorough knowledge and understanding of the novel and supports points with relevant contextual comment. There are points about Mrs Dubose being courageous when battling her morphine addiction, her criticism of Scout's lack of femininity and Mrs Dubose's strong views being an 'old confederate'. Further examples could have benefited this response further.

Level 4, 28 marks

As this is a closed book examination, candidates do not have to use quotations in their Prose responses. Examples can be specific references to specific episodes in the novel studied or paraphrased quotations.

Question 3

To Kill a Mockingbird

Q3. 'I said I would like it very much, which was a lie, but one must lie in certain circumstances ...' (Scout)

In what ways are lies significant in the novel?

Responses mainly focused on Mayella and Bob Ewell's lies, Dolphus Raymond, Dill and Heck Tate (in relation to Boo). Most responses followed a similar structure, where candidates focused on description of an incident followed with some explanation and a little context, then the next character and so on.

Some had a bit more nuance, for example, Mayella's fear of her father, compelling her to lie or the contrast of the devastating consequences of some lies compared to Dill's childish more innocent lies.

One examiner commented: 'This was a well-received question, which came up with a variety of different points and ideas. The responses generally were more able, and I think that was because it allowed students to debate the theme of lies and draw their own conclusions'.

Responses were often detailed in breadth or depth. Again, the full range of marks were awarded and so the question performed as expected.

Other examiner comments include:

'Lies was well covered very well with lots of thoughtful and developed examples. Candidates showed a good understanding of how Lee uses lies to represent contemporary ideals and how Scout's innocence allows us to consider their impact and value.'

'Most candidates explored the lies told by the Ewell family leading to Tom Robinson's conviction. They explored this through the lens of racism and class divisions, particularly commenting on how unfair the jury selection was. There were also discussions of how the lies within the community had led to prejudice and misunderstanding of Boo Radley's character and candidates generally presented him as a fairly heroic figure. There were some sympathetic portrayals of Walter Cunningham's lies about being hungry in order to maintain some dignity in the face of students who were younger than him. There were also some interesting discussions around Maycomb representing societal lies around differences between groups of people, told through a biblical lens.'

This is an example of an unusually short response for this novel.

In "To kill a Mockingbird", by Lee Hasper, lies are significant as it is presented the story of Tom Robinson, an tot innocent black man who got accused of raping a white girl, Mayella Ewell, due to hers and her father's lies.

Atticus Finch, the narrator's father, who was a fair lawyer, first introduced Tom Robinson when deciding to protect him in courtroom against Bob Ewell, Mayella's gather, who supported his doughter's statements. Many of Scout's feellings towards the case were presented in the novel making it and the theme of "lies" significant during the novel. Throughout the case, Atticus and even his children and their friend tried to protect the innocent Tom Robinson, but at the end of the novel he is killed. Lies are also significant in Boo Radley's story, who he was believed to be mentally ill and this being the reason why he never left his house. Scout, Jem and Dill tried to peckinside his house several times as they believed the scary goosip about Boo Radley, later revealed the was abused but it was by nis him not to leave the house. who taught significant in this novel they Lies ase are 0.0 Lead element of one of the secondory Robinson's Such as lovn

This is rather a short response to the question about lies. The candidate correctly identifies how Tom Robinson is a victim of the Ewells' lies that lead to his death. Boo Radley is briefly commented on and how lies are a 'leading element' of the novel. The lack of coverage and development hinders progress. The lack of contextual comment prevents the response gaining marks at the top of the level. There is some here.

Level 2, 14 marks

Context must be included in responses; however, there does not have to be a balance of coverage between novel and context as responses should be literary not historical essays. Ideally, short contextual points should be included throughout the essay to support the points made.

Question 4

Of Mice and Men

Q4. Explore the theme of love in Of Mice and Men.

This question appears to have performed well.

Most candidates could say something on George and Lennie's father/son love and supported points with a range of evidence from the novel, including examples of George looking after Lennie and the mercy killing out of love.

A few candidates identified Lennie's childlike love for animals and love for the American dream. Other points included Candy's love for his dog, love as a symbol of respect or compassion (Slim), love as only sexual and the lack of love in Curley's marriage. Other candidates considered Crooks' lack of family love or love from friendship. Most candidates included relevant contextual points, such as the life of the ranch hands who, being itinerant, were unable to form loving relationships.

Some Level 3 answers gave a couple of examples, usually the love shared between George and Lennie, and Curley's wife, although some responses lost focus on the Q and wrote about marriage.

There were some very successful responses that explored such as how love could be dangerous, as the hostile toxic masculinity does not allow for emotions as it's seen as weak and less manly, such as Candy, who could not let them see him crying over his dog.

Several cited 'the whole world is scared of each other' to highlight the lack of love. One candidate concluded that 'Love on the ranch a blessing and a curse to all who experienced it.'

Examiner comments include:

'The theme of love was very well addressed by most candidates in regard to George and Lennie, Candy and his dog, Curley's wife and Crooks. The best responses allied the discussion with the discrimination which robbed some characters of any love. In terms of context inevitably interwoven context was better than an opening /closing paragraph talking about: 'The Wall St crash', 'a microcosm' or 'the loneliness of itinerant workers.' Moreover, the better candidates didn't just regurgitate all they knew about every character – they answered the question! Overall, well answered however on the whole.'

'Some interesting takes on love such as love of the American Dream.'

'Some candidates recognised love as a 'fleeting and destructive' thing that, for most, was unattainable. Very few thought that Curley and his wife were a true representative of love. The theme of love allowed candidates to express their understanding of the lack of real connections, 'emotional deprivation', and craving for the comfort of the American Dream. More thorough answers also referenced characters who don't have love in their lives at all or even any understanding of it – Carlson. Some weaker responses didn't reference George and Lennie at all and didn't recognise the only actual love present. Some candidates misunderstood George's shooting of Lennie in that he can't have cared for him that much. Some responses referred to Lennie ending up in an asylum if George hadn't shot him – rather than him having a slow and painful death at the hands of Curley. References were often made recognising Candy's love for his dog and even Lennie's wholesome love for animals as well as a general love of dreams.'

'The most popular expression of 'love' discussed by candidates was the paternal/child relationship presented by George and Lennie, and the contrast in Lennie's unquestioning loyalty and George's possible motives. Some candidates also discussed Lennie's love for animals, and anything soft. There were many explorations around the marriage of Curley and his wife and their apparent lack of love for one another displayed through Curley's aggression, crudity and treatment of his wife as a possession. Candidates generally interpreted his wife's flirtatiousness as being linked to feeling unloved and worthless, although some responses condemned her behaviour. Many candidates also wrote about the love and admiration the men felt towards Slim as a natural leader, and Christ-like figure.'

In this response, the candidate demonstrates sound knowledge and understanding of the text through examples of the love between George and Lennie. There are comments about how George protects Lennie and how he treats him like a younger brother. Some specific examples are included in the response and there is recognition that George must make sacrifices for Lennie, but he chooses to care for and protect the innocent Lennie. The response lacks contextual comment and more examples could have been included, but there is enough here to slip into Level 3.

Level 3, 19 marks

Our second exemplar is a secure Level 3 response.

In the Novella "of phice and Men" the theme of Love has been proven to be writh only a few charellers compared to others. One of the only charecters that show love in this Novella is between George and lenny. Throughout the whole Novel George has been looking atter Leroy because George Loves Leroy as his bruther. An example of this is when George says: "don't talk to him" this was said to lengy to not to talk to the bass on he will know how his Love to lengis when the kills Lenny him self because if he did not trill lenny him self then archen whould have done it in a more Slow painful way making lenny suffer bearge himself said that life would be much easier without long but still George ear takes core of lenny because he loves lenny and cores forhim.

However, have not everyone an get lare and an example of this is between curbey and curtery's wite Even though they are married they do not love each other we know this because Corley's wife flicts with other men on the runch wakes by her books on twhen she monages to talk to them she alts very thosique flictosious and on the other hund curley goes to the bohare house which is on other way of saying strip Club eventhough he has a wife. When Curley's hate curley" which clearly shows that She doesn't love him at all. The relationship between Lenny and bearge contrasts the relationship between Curley and his wife where one side shows love and compassion and the other side shows hatred

Another charecter that does not have love In this Novella is Crooks. Crooks is as the only black consistion on the Farmer and the other ranchers do not show love to him afall. One for this is because he is black and reason back when this novel was written in the 19 905 Black people had no rights at all so Black people were treated very budly and Steinbeck spanst emphasis this when mooker gets bearen up every dristenas for fun and that crooks doesn't live with the other rouchers in the bunkhouse where the sleeps in hay. Curley's wife states she could get crooks hunged at only time if he did not lister to her which just Shows that no matter it grades is innocent or not they would still hang them him if there was a reason to 2050. This shows that no one Cores or loves for crooks

To conclude this the thene of love in of mice and men is very rare and only really seen between lenny and george and one reason for this is that most of the chargeders in the book are reachers and conchers often move about So they do not have the time to build such love However, Some people in the novel comut be loved because of theire theire rare. Targas

The candidate considers the love between George and Lennie with examples of how George looks after Lennie and how he shows his love by shooting him at the end of the novel. The candidate then goes on to consider the relationship between Curley and his wife, and how Curley's wife is flirtatious because she is in a loveless marriage. Paraphrased quotations are included to support points made. There are comments about Crooks and how there is no love shown for him. There are some contextual points and some smaller details, such as how Crooks is allowed in the bunkhouse at Christmas. The candidate concludes by saying that the ranch hands have no time for love. The response is not fully developed or sustained, but there is sound understanding and knowledge of the novel.

This response slips into Level 4. The candidate considers the brotherly love between George and Lennie, despite the many 'mishaps' along the way. There is also some comment about Slim finding their relationship unusual. There is some discussion about the absence of love, such as Carlson's harsh mannerisms and how Curley and his wife are hardly together. The candidate identifies the rarity of love and provides a range of ideas. Although examples could have been explored further, there is sufficient here to slip just into Level 4. There is some thoughtful comment offered.

Candidates should prove to the examiner their knowledge of the text – do not assume the examiner knows everything.

Our final Q4 exemplar is a Level 5 response.

John steinbeck presents the theme of love in the top novella of Mice and Men Detucen through the relationships of ether people.

Steinback first presents love in Of mice and Men through the companionship of preorge and Lennie, the two protagonists of the novella. Following the wall street crash in 1929 the US entered a protonged period of economic depression from which it only emerged with the onset of the second world war. During this period of gailed businesses, norsh preverty and long-term unemployement heards of migrant workers came to Ealifornia in search of work - 3 just like George and Lennie. This is a sustained and assured response. A range of points have been included and discussed in some detail, including George and Lennie's relationship, George shooting Lennie at the end of the novel, Candy's relationship with his dog, and Curley and his wife's relationship. There are some details and examples for each example and some thoughtful commentary offered, such as how Curley could have prevented his wife's death by showing her more love and attention. Overall, there is an assured knowledge and understanding of the novel demonstrated.

Question 5

Of Mice and Men

Q5. 'Curley's like a lot of little guys. He hates big guys.'

Discuss the character of Curley in the novel.

This appears to have been a very accessible question for most candidates. Most followed the examples plus explanation approach. These included Curley's position on the ranch (high heeled boots were often mentioned to show his difference) and his ability to get hands fired. His marital status, his boxing and aggressive nature were also considered. Many compared the lack of respect given to him from Slim and some considered Slim as a foil to Curley.

Many candidates used quotations to support the points made. Most used the example of Curley picking a fight with Lennie as an example of both his aggression and his insecurity over his height. Most referred to the 'glove fulla Vaseline' and considered his lack of love for his wife and his visits to the brothel.

Examiners commented on points such as: 'I quite liked the observation that it was Slim who touched his wife to confirm she was dead and not Curley. I also liked how Curley represents the "stock villain" and how Curley is used to show the hierarchical status of the 1930s. I really loved the exploration of hands to make a point: Slim's like a temple dancer. Lennie's like paws, Candy just a stick, so when Curley lost his hand, he would have been devastated as his boxing ability gave him status. I would never have thought of that.'

Examiner comments include:

'OMAM was by far the most popular choice again and candidates were well versed in all aspects of Curley's character and how he represents everything negative about the time. Lots of references to his 'toxic masculinity' and 'imagined superiority'. Better responses compared and contrasted him with other characters as well as just saying what he does in the novel.'

'Questions 4&5 drew some mature responses; candidates were usually aware of the differing forms of love in Of Mice and Men and the Curly answer drew some excellent responses particularly in relation to the character interaction with the farm hands.'

'Many were very good at spotting Curley's insecurities or 'Napoleon complex' as a shorter 'pugnacious' character. His relationship with his wife was a big talking point as to why he has 'ants in his pants'. Overall, again some excellent answers with good takes on why we should even have some sympathy for him.' 'Candidates explored Curley's character through his masculinity, status and lack of popularity. His treatment of his wife was deemed as particularly abhorrent by most candidates and the fact that he talked about her with the men in sexual terms was seen as disloyal and demeaning. There was some sympathy for his loneliness as his status within the ranch set him apart from the other men, as well as his sense of inferiority through his short stature. Candidates felt that his injuries sustained when Lennie fought back were deserved, but again were able to sympathise with his attempts to demonstrate physical superiority. There were many discussions around his lack of care about his wife's death in terms of loss and grief.'

'Some interesting discussion on the hierarchy of the ranch and meritocracy as opposed to nepotism.'

The first exemplar is a Level 2 response.

In the none 1 th of mice and men' by Jon stinberk ture is one character who stands out for being either really cocky or extremally confident. That character is curley.

There is some knowledge and understanding of the character, but the response lacks contextual comment and ideas are not fully explored. Comments include: Curley's position on the ranch and his father being the boss, Curley's authority, his stature, wearing a glove, being a boxer and a brief reference to the fight. There are several very valid points; however, the response lacks details and is underdeveloped. The final paragraph is not entirely accurate.

Level 2, 11 marks

Although film versions can be good teaching resources, students must be made aware that not all film versions are a true representation of the novel. Some film versions include details not included in the novel(s). Of course, candidates should be writing about the novel and not the film. This second exemplar is a Level 3 response.

Throughout of Or Mice and Men' Steinbeck uses portrays Cortey to the character of Curley as unliked, unloved and unwanted - he is the centre of e almost every threat in the novel. Curley is the Boss' son and the only character in the novel with a wife. He is often ridiculed by other characters on the ranch for his glove fulla Vaseline' and his flirtatious ed wife - who, is unamed throughout the novel. Steinbeck uses the character of Curley to create dramatic tension & and is a twing constant threat to George and lennie. One of the ways Curley is a threat is down to his own insignsecurity - he does not like his height. He . This causes the ten tension with Lennie who is a big guy'. Curley tries to mana manage this by sticking his elbows out and starting a fight with Lennie- which he shamefully loses. The pact that he is an ex-boxer and the Bosses Boss' son installs fear in our two main characters George and Lennie. ..... Stenbeck portrays, to the reader, that Curley is a controlling husband. to his proupe. This is seen clearly through his wife whose name we do not know and is Simply repared to as Curley's Wife. This gives the reader a sense that she - and many women around the time of the Great Depression - was viewed as nothing more than property; her husbands property. A side of Curley is revealed through his wife when she says: 'I don't like Curley.' and makes a comment about him not being a 'nice guy'. St Stembeck, through this simple interaction of characters that Curley is not only hated by a everyone on the ranch but is even & despised by his own wife. Stienbeck conveys to the reader that Curley is possibly abusive to his wife, manipulative and controlling. Steinbeck also demonstrates to the reader that Curley is uncaring. This can be seen in the way he does not mourn his wife after her death, instead taking the opportunity to shoot Lennie. Through Stenbecks enotive language, vivid description. and character views on him the reader sees Curley as the centre of everyone's struggles, (threatening to five them or 'get than canned), minianipulalite, controlling and threatening. Curley starts fights, raises tension and numics the way the Great & Depression destroyed lives.

The candidate demonstrates sound understanding and knowledge of the novel and character. Some strengths of the response include comments about how Curley is 'unliked, unloved and unwanted' and 'manipulative, controlling and threating'. Unfortunately, there are insufficient details supporting these very good points. Other very good, but underdeveloped, ideas include: Curley being the boss's son, being ridiculed for wearing a glove to keep his hand soft and being disliked by his wife. There are some references to context. More development and exploration of the examples provided could have secured a much higher mark.

A short plan is always helpful, but do not spend too long on it!

This example is sustained and demonstrates a thorough understanding of the character and the novel.

In of Mire and Men, awley is a worker on a ranch, and he is the son of the Boss of the ranch. The character of cully is also portrayed as discriminated against, yet also discriminated against, as well as discriminating agenust others. Curley is described as " that like a lot of little guye. He haves big golys' During the great depression, monual labour and itinerant workers were necked the most and these workers would prejerably be tall and Strong, This quote shows how Curley and a lot of little gurys are hatered rowards big gurys, because they are nore lucky. Curley is also shown portrayed as discriminated against, as he is osten regered to as "little" and dismissed due to his height. Slim, the prince of the rouch ' said "where is that dirty little rat, i'll get im mysels." Despite the character of sim seeming almost god-like, he encourages vislence against curley, showing how violence against him is obay because be is little'. This shows how during the great depression, it was only seen as wrong is a healthy white man who was tall got beaten up. Steinbeck used the character of curley to not only show that during the great depression,

Something as seemingly minfortant as height would get you discommatel against, but also how curley's 'pugnowing' attitude Lowards others was rewarded with vislence towards him.

What The choracter of Curley is also partrayed as relying on human rative as a reasoning by his actions. In the book, Curbey Sees Lemily and Walks over to him like a terrier. The zoomonphic der during the 1920's, men and thingat workers would often act in selsion ways, and steinbeck believes that it is because of human nature. Steinbect grew up in a church, and so he Hought that the reason humans rely on violence is because eve took an apple from a tree. Through anley specifying where he is being to shoot george, it sharry his bloodbust son seeing a 'big guy' whom he have, bleeding out to death.

The candidate begins with some relevant contextual comment and goes on to explore how Curley is 'negatively masculine'. Comments are also made about the misogynistic society, Curley's 'pugnacious attitude' and how Curley is discriminated against because of his size. The candidate comments that Steinbeck uses Curley to illustrate the 'cruelty of human nature'. A range of fully relevant examples support the points made and context is included throughout the response. There are some assumptive comments, and more examples of what Curley says and does could be included, but the response is placed towards the top of level 4.

This is a maturely expressed and confident response that explores many aspects of Curley's character. The response begins with some discussion about how Curley is consumed by power and violence and then goes on to explore how he is lonely and insecure, having a Napoleon syndrome, how he wears symbols of power and status (such as a Stetson hat), his boxing skills and how this makes him 'slightly admired by the ranch workers', and more. This is a very detailed response with a wide range of examples of the character throughout the novel. Contextual points are integrated and relevant.

The Whale Rider

Q6. In what ways are hopes and dreams for the future significant in the novel?

Most responses to this question were very successful and often gained marks in Levels 4 and 5, which is similar to previous series.

Hopes and fears for the future were often explored through Koro's fears for the future of the tribe and how Kahu offered the tribe hope for survival in the future.

This is a Level 3 exemplar.

In this response, the candidate begins with a short plan and goes on to explore a range of hopes and fears for the future. Points include: Koro's hopes in finding a successor; Kahu's hopes of being accepted by and to gain affection from Koro; Koro's fears for the future of the tribe and finally the hopes and fears of the whale herd who hope that 'oneness' will be restored. All points are relevant; however, none are developed in any great detail. The response is not sustained. More coverage of each point would have benefited this response. ## Question 7

The Whale Rider

Q7. Discuss the relationship between Kahu and Nanny (Nani) Flowers in The Whale Rider.

Like Q6, most responses to this question were very successful.

Many answers successfully explored this relationship within a patriarchal society, with some thoughtful responses exploring Nanny (Nani) Flowers' humorous tone and interactions with her husband, Koro. Many answers explored the useful example of the planting of the birth chord and Anny trying to convince her husband, Koro, to change and accept Kahu. The close bond between Nanny and Kahu was understood by all candidates.

The following is a Level 5 exemplar.

In the Whale Rider, Kanu and Nani Flowers are presented as strong, interligent women in the face of a culture that devalues their worth, due to patriarchal values; in the misogristic native of the tribe.

Ihimaera presents the relationship between Kahu and Nani Flowers as a caring one in which they have a deep connection. At the news of kahu's birth Nani's "Lips were quivering with emotion" as "Lears started rolling down the old lady's face" and shows s highlights the connection between the women in the tribe, Nani and Renue (kanu's mother) and they have to support eachother in a patharchal structure. The Verb "quivering" suggests that she Nani was quite happyto hear kanu's birth sunvike koro was discontent with Kahu's gender, and Thimaera presents this to challerge patharchal views.

Thimaera further displays their relationship a mother brings comfort to a baby, Nani Flowers is also in the some position and this neverals her Stout - hearded nature. Nani Flowers is presented as obstinate as she overnues koro Apirana (Nani's husband) and antagonises males authority for Kahu as she mentions that Kahu "has the right to have her birth cord placed as dose as Thimaera presents Nari as a mothery

and forth "and the repetition suggests that just now with Kahn in her ams, rocking back and forth, back

Kahu "has the right to have her bitch cord placed in this site" and this potrays Nani Flower's dominance over Koro as in Maon culture, papatrianulen (Earth Mother) provides identify and unity to all people and they have a spiritual connection with her and this connection is shown through when a baby is born, the whenva is buried in a saved site and this is significant as Nani Flowers thicks that is important that the tradition is still canced despite the baby's gerder, and that "Weshave to be boken!"

During Kanu's school ceremony, Kahu was giving a performance on Matori language and culture and during it someone sould that kanu was a "cracker" and Nani flowers heart unerched for Kahn and Kahu had a seat reserved for kone and the rarrator (Rawin) describes it "wike a gap "missing in "a now of teeth" which symbolises Kono's absence in Kahu's life, and kany was very saddered by this.

Thinaera presents Narias a "guardian" to Kahu which creates a stronger bond within their relationship. In the novel, Koro Apirana set a task for the boys to "retrieve the stone" and "despite valiant attempts" they could not do and Kahu is the one uno retrieves the stone, and Nani Flowers tells Rain'" Not a word. Not a word about the stone or our Kahn" and the pronour "our" suggests how valued kann is to the characters in the novel, and Nani Flowers does this because she geels that Kno " is not ready" for it. But then later on in the novet rovel, Koro finds out and "The old man understood. He raised his amsas if to claw dan the sky upon him "and this suggests that that Koro feels a sense of regret and "old man" is reductive as he is a respected and poweful rigwein the novel unich is in similar to Nani's way of calling Koro as "old paker", and this is quite destructive.

Inimatera present Nani Flowers and Kanu as determined women and the Kahu rethering the Stone proves Koro's views as wrong as & Kahu has proved helsely to be the saviour of the tribe, and thus she proves against the misogynistic native of the bibe. In Maori culture, there have been different attitudes towards women and gins and Thimaera is unate this rover to suggest that the society need to modernise their ideas about women and gives inheriting Maori culture because she is the saview that can achieve harmony with nature again. Nani flowers realises Kahu's affinity with the whale and she mentions that "she is Kahuta Te Rangi-she is Paileeq. She is the Whale Rider", this bicolon reveals that Kahu is the whale Rider.

Thimaera presents Noni Flowers and idolations and kany as informated as Nani Flower always composes kahn as "Nari wert to kahu's bedroon and the saw Rainin Saw "her conforting" Kahn and this & illustrates the Love that Nari has for Kahu despite her husbandis clistike of Kahn of who repeatedly says " are away " and here Nani Flowers is presented as a fenale une values gives and their rights and her nurring nature is revealed and Ininaera unote this novel for his daughter to show that gins are valued in Maon auture.

Towards the end of the novel, Kahu goes to save the unale and then she is in "hospital" and Nani Flowers had also coupsed and is also in hospital and she sudderly asks "mere's kanu? mere is my talu?. The possessive pronoin once again establishes kahu's importance in the tribe and the questions areate a serve of paric and & this ab demonstrates how compassionate and adoning wani is towards kahr. This is also the scere where Koro prindsout tells kann that she is "the best grandchild in the whole wide word. It doesn't matter if it's a boy or a gil," and the type hyperbolic alliteration draws attention to imposence of kahn and NO can be better than Kahn and now Karonas overome the patharchal news and this is his realisation that Kann is the sanow of the tibe which is what Noni constantly fires proving throughout the novel as the earlier and on - Nari questions think kno and asks " What is wrong with kahu?" and Nani Flowers is allougs beside kannis side and the tas she is presented as revenent and admiring towards Kahu.

[himdera presents the relationship between Kahn and Wani flowers as very close and reveals the deep connection with them as they are the women who have overcome patriar and news of society and help eachether and support eachother to prove this and uomen can achieve anything and Nari Flowers had a strong belief in Kahuthat she could r of the tribe and proved to the Konothat en one coupable peeble as how they are presented in NO+ the pathorchal sol

This is an assured response that explores several points about the relationship between Nanny (Nani) and Kahu. The candidate immediately identifies that both are strong women and share a caring relationship. There is an instant bond and connection between Nanny and Kahu and Nanny is a motherly figure. Other points include: Nanny being obstinate and over-ruling Koro and burying Kahu's birth cord in the marae; the school ceremony; the retrieval of the stone; Nanny being 'idolatrous and Kahu as infatuated' and more. There are some unnecessary language points and some ideas could have been developed further; however, this is clearly an assured response.

Question 8

The Joy Luck Club

Q8. Explore the significance of Suyuan Woo in The Joy Luck Club.

As seen in previous series, this is the least popular option, but responses to this novel are often very successful, with most gaining marks in Levels 4 and 5. The knowledge and understanding of this challenging text is often impressive.

All candidates identified Suyuan as the founder of the Joy Luck Club and how she was forced to abandon her twin daughters in China.

Some candidates systematically worked through the novel where Suyuan features and included a range of examples to support points made.

The following is a Level 4 response.

The character of Suynan woo is extremely significant in the Jay Luck club' This is due to her mercany Jounding the Joy Luck Club, her impact on Jing mei and her strong Sense of Chinese heritage that She always showed before she died. Suguran Jounded the Jay Luck Chub after she fled from tweilin to America to escape the invading Japanese military. She jounded He Joy Luck Club because she is portrayed in the 1810 novel as an optimistic character. This due to her "strong "spirit" which is a theme which runs through through the whole of He Joy Lack Club. When Suyuan saw that Lindo, ying ying and An-mei

were much like her and had been through unspeakable tradgoolies" She did not let her strong spirit break and instead used their tradgeolies as kepernicht juel to create the Joy Luck Club and to being Joy into these women's lives, as sugues believed that the knock brought to them by He Joy Luck Chub "was their only Jay" Therefore Suyuan was a significant character, as She brought "33" #1 to Hese wome

Suyuan Woo. is also important because of the impact that She had on her daughter Jing-mei Woo. Jing-mei is responsible be Bettie portraying her mother in the novel and prosonts Suyuan of as extremely loving, but also having caused conflict at the same time. This theme of mother-daughter relationships, is extremely promenant throughout the novel the relationstip between Sugar and her doughter is possibly the nost important. One example of the conflict between suyuan and

Jing-mei is the conflict caused by her mother making Jing-mei play the piano when she never wanted to- This caused Jing-mei to disober her & mother and that red torthe caused Suynan to tell Jing-me: that "only one kind of daughter can live in This house obediend kind "However, this conflict becomes resolved after Suguar's death when Jing-mei decides to play the piano again and finds that their is a second half to the piece she played, and the second hay is called "perjecitly contented," Which inustrates the resolvement between Jing-mei and Suyuan. This

Finally, Suguar's Strong sense of passing chineses heritage, (which is another Heme we see often in He novel) has a large significance in the Baret Joy Luck Club, because it-impacts everyone acound has she has a strong sense of Chinese Culture running through her character. An example of this is the necklace to which Suyuan passed down to Jing-mei after she died . which Jing-mei comes to love as it shows Suynan giving her daughter her chinese identity and keeps her mother close to her at all times. Another example of suguraris sense of Chinese character/hesitage is He story of the swan Jeetles that She used to tell Jing-mei. Jing-mei also come to love this story as Barren she did with the necklace. The This is because the story talks about migrating from china to America and passing down the swan deather as it "corries an my good intentions" Jing-mei believes Hat Fris story is extremely similar to her mothers story and Merefore be loves it like her mother.

In conclusion, suguen wee is an extremely significant character in He nover because of the impact she has on other character even after her deall

This is a sustained response demonstrating a thorough understanding of the character and the novel. Points include: Suyuan being the founder of The Joy Luck Club with the intention of bringing joy and happiness to others; fleeing Kweilin and going to America; her impact on Jing-mei and the mother-daughter conflicts; how Suyuan passed her Chinese heritage on to Jing-mei and how after her death the mother-daughter conflict was resolved. Unusually, there are no comments about how Suyuan abandoned her twin daughters in China and how Jing-mei goes to China to try and reunite the family after her mother's death. The novel naturally lends itself to contextual points, but the response lacks explicit historical context.

The Joy Luck Club

Q9. In an interview, Amy Tan said: 'There was something about this country [China] that I belonged to'.

How is the theme of belonging to places or people important in the novel?

With just 40 responses, this was the least popular question, but was very successful for the candidates that attempted it. Most considered how mothers and daughters struggled with their cultural identity and often included contextual points about Amy Tan's personal experiences and her struggles with feelings of belonging.

The following is a Level 5 response.

The theme of belonging to people is explored throughout the novel, in relation to the characters, take and how they belong or don't belong in their families or in China or America.

This is shown throughout all the mothers and daughters in the now I.

In this confident and assured response, the candidate explores in some detail how the daughters feel as though they are American, and the mothers feel as though they do not belong. The mothers feel there is an 'invisible wall' between them and their daughters because of the clash in culture and understanding. Specific examples are provided, such as Suyuan's and Lindo' past. Some very good points are made, for example, even though the daughters feel they belong in America, they do not always 'fit in', such as when Rose is discriminated by Ted's mother because of her heritage. The candidate concludes that 'belonging' is determined by where the mothers and daughters grew up. Contextual points are made throughout the response.

Question 10

Things Fall Apart

Q10. Explore the relationship between Okonkwo and Obierika in Things Fall Apart.

Responses to this novel are always a joy to read. The relationship between the characters was fully understood and the differing personalities were explored in some depth. The strong friendship between the two characters was explored in some depth, such as how Obierika sells Okonkwo's yams for him whilst he was in exile and how he keeps Okonkwo informed of events back home. Obierika's loyalty to his friend was often explored and how, at the end of the novel, he asks the commissioner if his men can help him to take down Okonkwo's body.

As seen in previous series, responses were very successful, often gaining marks in Level 5.

This is an example of a top Level 4 response.

Another example of this is when I kenfung

This is a detailed response that demonstrates a thorough understanding of the relationship between Okonkwo and Obierika. This is a sustained personal response that explores a number of points, including: the contrasting characters; Obierika is a foil to Okonkwo; the different mindsets, with Obierika being more levelheaded and calmer; Obierika advising Okonkwo not to get involved with Ikemefuna's murder, how Obierika looks after Okonkwo's crops during his banishment and how they fit together 'like puzzle pieces'. Other key points are not considered and there is a lack of historical context; however, contextual points in relation to events in the novel are evident.

Question 11

Things Fall Apart

Q11. 'You sound as if you question the authority and decision of the Oracle ...' (Okonkwo)

Examine the importance of authority in the novel.

This was the most popular question for the text. Authority was explored through several examples. Most included comments about the authority of the egwugwu and the Oracle of the Hills and caves. Some focused more on the authority of the colonists and missionaries. Contextual points were often naturally embedded and supported the points made. There was a small minority of exceptions where a narrative response was provided; however, understanding was often extremely good, being assured and perceptive, and responses were often sophisticated and maturely expressed.

This final exemplar is a very successful response that gains full marks.

The Writer, Chinua Achebe user Things Fall ap Aport to highlight duthority in the equitarian ideology in Igho society. The trager The protagonist, Okonkuo is a trayic hero and tragic heros were developed by the playwright Aristotle to have great strength, but a fatal flaw. Okonkwo's fatal flow was the fear of becoming like no M his father Unoka who had no authority in Umofia. Upon Uhoka's death he had none of the four titles which were obtainable for any free man that wasn't an OSV. This lead to Upoka being rediculed or "lover" and "looper" by his village. De Mon Homever, despite Iyho cutlure supporting Egolitorish meaning ongo anyone could achieve greatiness through hard work Out Curlike the European culture of the lote 1800's were you had to be born into nobility), Iglo culture contradicted it through potriarchy and the dissepproval of out cuts. Patriorchy is seen in wife-beating being normalized and is seen often in households of men like offensive Okonking who "ruled his household with a heavy hand" causing hir "hives and children lived in proper perpetual fear". This shows have women couldn't achieve equally to men me contradicting the Egulitorism ideology. In addition, homen were seen as a Sign of wealth as an accessry to men and in this polygomoul lociety, the more women you married, the more presperous you are highlighting how little authority women had had in comportion to men. However However, women had authorities they had to sustain such or providing food and children for their hurband. Achebe includer the brutal side of igbo culture in the normalized beating of homen to provide on unbiased account on Igbo society as the his aim was not to ylorify Nigerian culture but to provide accuracy for Nigerian readers to know about their Culture and to dispell stereotyper which were very common in the late 19th century and early 20th Century in books such of the "Heart of Darkness" which presented APROP Africans as all the same and "prinitive" and cultureless which is historically incorrect.

Although women had less authority than men, there were a fer exceptions to the limit. of female authority shown in characters such as Chielo. Chielo was a priviters of the oracle and men can go to her to question their milfortone to the Earth Godden, Ani. Unolia travelly to her and questions his poor crop yield and is told that his land is "overworked" and needs to put in more effort.

Okonkuo wants to the be employed completely different to Unoka and disliker men of low authority which reminder him of his father. This is shown at a meeting of men and upon draugreement with a men of no Fitler, Okonkno exclaims, "This meeting is for men" showing how to be fomenine is insulting especially in a population village of nor like "Umatia". Okonkno has two of the four titles and is told by an eller the Celders colled "Ndiche"], "Those whose palm-kernels were cracked by benevolent Spirit should not forget to be humble. The Achele was this provert to show how the elder mistokenly calls Olconkno out for inheriting his fortune when the truth is that he inhorited no young morey or young wives from his father. Achebe also was pop uses proverby to show the reader how the Igho people spoke as they did not write so instead, they used proverby and shorry-stories to convey life lessons or knowledge.

Another example at Authority is when the oracle decides that Okonkuo's adapted isn "Ikemetana" (also known as "ill-fated lad" and "doomed") to be killed. Okonkuo unquestions the decision as he understands the authority the Oracle has and how powerful gods like "Chukna" and

The importance of Authority is also potrayed in Achebei we of Nigerian larguage such as "Chi". A personi "chi" is their personal god who is responsible for their fote. This is a maturely expressed response that begins with an impressive point about male 'egalitarian ideology' and Okonkwo's 'fatal flaw' being his fear of weakness. The candidate goes on to present a wide range of examples where authority is demonstrated throughout the novel, including: the 'normalised beating of women', who had very little authority, with the exception of Chielo; how Okonkwo strives for power and authority; how Okonkwo does not question the Oracle over the decision to kill Ikemefuna; the use of the Nigerian language and how this provides a sense of authority; the authority of the white missionaries and more. Context is embedded throughout the essay and is mostly relevant to the points being made.

- demonstrate an understanding of the overall meaning of the poem
- focus on the question
- refer to form and structure and try to suggest why this may have been used
- give examples of language and explain their effect on the reader
- comment on all areas of the poem, not just the first few lines
- use short quotations and avoid copying large areas of the poem.
- When responding to Modern Prose, based on their performance on this paper, candidates should remember to:
- focus on the question
- avoid narrative retelling of the events in the novel
- provide a range of examples from their chosen text remember that as this is a closed book examination, examples need not be quotations but examples of events or episodes within the novel
- prove to the examiner their knowledge of the text do not assume the examiner knows everything
- comment on contextual points and try to relate these to the points being made
- avoid dealing with context separately. Do not write a page of historical background, but link all contextual points with an example from the novel and in relation to the question being answered
- when using film versions, which are most valuable teaching aids, remind candidates that not all scenes in a film appear in the novel that they are studying and that their responses must be based on the novel and not the film version.
