General Marking Guidance

- All candidates must receive the same treatment. Examiners must mark the first candidate in exactly the same way as they mark the last.
- Mark schemes should be applied positively. Candidates must be rewarded for what they have shown they can do rather than penalised for omissions.
- Examiners should mark according to the mark scheme not according to their perception of where the grade boundaries may lie.
- There is no ceiling on achievement. All marks on the mark scheme should be used appropriately.
- All the marks on the mark scheme are designed to be awarded. Examiners should always award full marks if deserved, i.e. if the answer matches the mark scheme. Examiners should also be prepared to award zero marks if the candidate's response is not worthy of credit according to the mark scheme.
- Where some judgement is required, mark schemes will provide the principles by which marks will be awarded and exemplification may be limited.
- When examiners are in doubt regarding the application of the mark scheme to a candidate's response, the team leader must be consulted.
- Crossed out work should be marked UNLESS the candidate has replaced it with an alternative response.

It is of great strategic importance and Pakistan did not want India controlling it • Kashmir was important to Pakistan because the majority of its inhabitants were Muslims. Pakistan was set up as a homeland for Muslims and wanted to protect the Kashmiri Muslims • Kashmir was symbolically significant. Pakistan was a new nation which needed to show that it could support itself and stand up to its larger neighbour. Letting India do as it liked with the princely states would not do that. Relevant Points to counter the argument may include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The refugee crisis was extremely important. Over 10 million Muslims moved from India to Pakistan by January 1948 and the government needed to find accommodation for them • The establishment of Pakistan was followed by serious outbreaks of communal violence in late 1947. There was a need for the Pakistan government to find a way to heal the social and religious divisions created by partition • Pakistan was not a united country. In addition to the various peoples within Pakistan having different traditions, cultures and lifestyles, there was a major geographical split, with East Pakistan being a thousand miles from West Pakistan • The new country had no government buildings, no civil service and no capital. There was an urgent need to establish the machinery of government • It was quite possible that Pakistan could go to war with India over Kashmir, but it lacked officers and up to date equipment. It had no ordnance factory capable of making military materials. Look for a judgment/conclusion

This was seen at the Battles of Buxar and Plassey • The empire came under almost constant attack from foreign leaders. In particular, the wars against the Persians, Marathas and Afghans weakened the empire • The size of the empire made it difficult to administer. Decisions often had to be relayed over thousands of miles and so government was slow • The mansabadari system was not sufficiently supervised and administrative efficiency declined • The wealth and influence of the nobility grew in the empire and some of the emperors found it very difficult to control their nobility. 6(c)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • In the early 1980s there were Sikh uprisings in India. The Indian government accused Pakistan of providing arms and training for the Sikhs • In 1981 Pakistan sent troops to the Siachen Glacier and discovered that 300 Indian troops were already there. Relations were soured further by this conflict • In 1987 the Indian army began exercises in the Rajasthan Desert to intimidate Pakistan. War was avoided only by General Zia flying to India to meet Prime Minister Rajeev Gandhi • India objected to Pakistan receiving significant sums in aid from the USA in the 1980s. There was long-standing rivalry between Pakistan and India, and this aid meant Pakistan's armed forces were strengthened.

Other relevant material not suggested below must also be credited. Indicative content Relevant Points which support the statement may include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Relations were initially poor, as the USA took several years to send an ambassador to Pakistan and seemed reluctant to form an alliance • In 1965 the USA joined with the UK in establishing an arms embargo. This was very damaging to Pakistan as it relied on the USA for most of its military supplies. So, relations were poor • Relations were poor from 1977 when Zia came to power because the USA did not approve of military regimes. In 1979 the US embassy was burned down and all aid programmes were cancelled • Relations deteriorated as a result of Pakistan's nuclear programme. President Bush blocked aid to the country and refused to sell F-16 jets to Pakistan. The USA declared Pakistan as a state sponsor of terrorism and placed economic sanctions on it. Relevant Points to counter the argument may include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Relations were good from 1950 after Liaquat Ali Khan visited the USA and Pakistan joined SEATO and CENTO • Ayub allowed the USA to build air bases in Pakistan and remained loyal to the USA during the U2 crisis. This meant relations were good • As a result of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan relations between Pakistan and the USA improved as the USA gave Pakistan huge loans and grants to build up its armed forces to oppose the Soviet Union • Relations were good under President Clinton. He provided $388 million in military equipment and his wife and daughter visited Pakistan in 1995. Look for a judgment/conclusion
